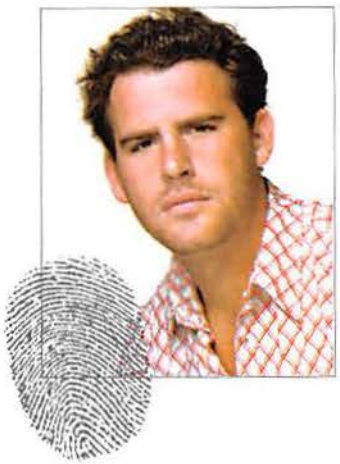
YOUR LIFE MADE BETTER



JIMMY JELLINEK
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

So here it is. We think it's pretty f'ing awesome. Hopefully, you will think the same. There isn't much more to it than that. We make a magazine that makes your life better. You buy the magazine and start living like a rock star. No need to complicate matters. Too much of your life is confusing enough as it is. We're here to be that one constant in what is an otherwise disturbing universe.

READER LETTERS

CRAZED CORNHUSKER

Nebraska's Tom Osborne is one of the worst college coaches ["Worst Coaches," August]? You've got to be kidding! If you're basing your list on "thug schools," you should include Larry (Miami), Moe (Florida), and Curly (Florida State).

Jim Miller
Lincoln, NE

Our research department looked into your letter, and they discovered Larry, Moe, and Curly don't coach at any of those schools. Do a little homework next time, Jimbo.

See your letter? Then you've won this Platinum Edition Scarface DVD!

JUST FOR THE TASTE OF IT

Great story on Coca Sek ["Colombian Gold," August]. The Mayans also discovered a hallucinogenic drink made from a plant. Would you hire me to find it?

Shari D.
Via e-mail

Sorry, but this sounds like the perfect Christmas vacay. For us.

ICE, ICE, BABY

August's "Trivia Expert" asked, "Why do bars put ice in the urinals?" The original reason was to give drunk guys something to aim at instead of pissing all over the toilet, walls, floor, guys in line.

Allen Garland
Via e-mail

Uh, actually, that was just your mommy's potty-training trick.

DOUBLE VISION

I received my August issue today, and when I saw the cover I was so excited because I thought my favorite girl, Cobie Smulders from the CBS show How I Met Your Mother, had made the cover. Fifteen minutes of drooling later, I noticed it was Elsa Pataky (not that I'm complaining). Get Cobie Smulders on the Maxim cover so I can think it's Elsa and you can keep confusing me.

MAXIM CASINO

GO BIG IN VEGAS

We fondly recall New Year's Day 2006.

On January 1 we helped 20 gamblers kick off the year with high stakes blackjack at Maxim Casino's inaugural event, hangovers be damned. VIPs worked the tables in the High Limit room of Nevada's Green Valley Ranch Resort and Casino to the tune of $50,000 in winnings, while Maxim models mingled. The year's been downhill ever since.

Don't waste your time trying to solve things for yourself. Present your problem to us and we'll dispatch a pro to set everything straight.

Maxim, Please Help!
From: William Wedig
Date: September 4, 2006 10:16 AM
To: Fixer@maxim.com
Subject: Maxim, Please Help!
Dear Maxim,
I just started playing at a pool hall in my new neighborhood. I thought I was pretty good, but I keep losing my shirt to these yuppie pricks who've been going there for years. I have to show them what's up. Maxim, help me keep my pride!
William Wedig
Sunnyside, New York

JENNIFER BARRETTA

THE FIX
Rest easy, William, we're sending in professional pool player Jennifer Barretta. One of the top female players in the world, she'll boost your pool shark status from guppy to great white.

THE SETUP
William meets his Fixer. They grab some chalk, powder up their hands, and start to restore his scratched dignity. Let the games begin!

THE WIN
Left: Jennifer sinks the eightball with ease. Right: William and Jennifer bask in the glory of victory. The other guys leave with nothing. Suckers.

SELF-HELP

HUSTLE AND FLOW

Jennifer Barretta shows you how to pull off a proper swindle.

Lose the ego
Play yourself off as mediocre. This usually takes humility and a dose of high praise for your opponent. Don't be afraid to lay it on thick.

Get "lucky"
Miss and don't leave your opponent a shot, or miss and bank the ball in "by mistake."

Be tricky
Let your opponent take his balls off the table except the eightball. A decent player can easily run a table with his opponent's balls out of the way.

Wear sneakers
After you win, escaping from the bar with the money and your thumbs intact will sometimes require a sprint out to the parking lot.

GET FIXED Have a problem that needs solving? Send in your sob story to fixer@maxim.com and we might send in the Fixer to sort things out.

MOVIE OF THE MONTH

The Departed

Why Scorsese's Beantown-based potboiler will leave you as satisfied as Travis Bickle after a hard, bloody rain.

Let's face it: Martin Scorsese's last few films have...sucked. (Uh, Gangs of New York or The Aviator, anyone?) The Departed, a remake of the Hong Kong flick Infernal Affairs, tells the story of Colin Sullivan (Matt Damon), a young Irish hood who infiltrates an undercover police unit in order to gather inside information for his awesomely amoral boss, Frank Costello (Jack Nicholson). Simultaneously, undercover cop Billy Costigan (Leonardo DiCaprio) gains the gang leader's trust and sinks deep into Boston's criminal underworld. As lies are revealed, each man must out the other first to stay alive. No matter how this film turns out, we guarantee people will be talking about it in 50 years, if only because of a rumored scene where Nicholson snorts coke off a girl's ass during a drug-fueled threesome.

OPINION

Pete's Picks!

Pete Hammond delivers us from movie ignorance.

The Black Dahlia
Out: September 15
The director of Scarface adapts James Ellroy's novel about the gruesome 1940s murder of a Hollywood starlet. And it has Scarlett Johansson!

Man of the Year
Out: October 13
Robin Williams is a late-night talk-show host who launches a jokey presidential bid only to discover...he may actually win! Don't even think about it, Leno.

All the King's Men
Out: September 22
A charismatic Louisiana politician, "Boss" Willie Stark, becomes torn between public service and his ravenous lust for power. Just like Bono.

School for Scoundrels
Out: September 29
Napoleon Dynamite enrolls in a class to help him woo the woman of his dreams. The only problem is that Bad Santa is chasing the same bit of tail.

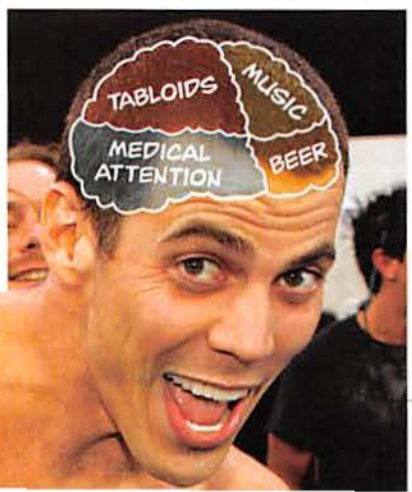
American Hardcore
Out: September 22
This documentary takes you back to the early days of punk, when Henry Rollins had a neck and the Bad Brains were what it meant to be "black metal."

MENTAL BREAKDOWN



Steve-O

Here's how Jackass: Number Two's madman kills the pain.

1. Beer: "Let's just say Miller High Life's generosity was very important."
2. Music: "I listen to death metal to get myself ready for a stunt. Some days I'm braver than others."
3. Medical attention: "The ambulances show up before we even set up the cameras, dude. Yeah, it's pretty gnarly."
4. Tabloids: "I love looking through tabloid magazines...for myself."

If love hurts, lust may just cause a bit of hemorrhaging. "I was so into Kelly and her performance that I got a nosebleed," Nip/Tuck creator Ryan Murphy has said about the 30-year-old beauty's debut. But that's just the beginning of her catastrophe-inducing powers. Last year Kelly was flying to New York when her plane burst into flames, forcing a crash-landing. And during the filming of her new action movie, The Marine, the steering wheel fell off her stunt car. In her latest, Kelly may play the kidnapped wife of the WWE's John Cena, but given her track record, those kidnappers will need protecting. If Kelly can bloody a nose with a stare, just imagine what her fists can do.

Laying it on the Line in Louisville

Mike talks more smack than anyone. So when Fred's #1 ranked team came to town, he backed it up by betting his best asset. Fred isn't a gambler, but this was the opportunity he'd been waiting for. After a few beers and a 48-3 pummeling, the clippers quickly met Mike's scalp. Later at the bar, Mike got plenty of second looks, and surprisingly, two dates for next weekend.

The Killers

Sam's Town (Island Def Jam)

Facial fuzz isn't the only thing that's different about the Killers. Their follow-up to Hot Fuss swaps their trademark New Wave synth sound for rock guitars. Every track on Sam's Town, from the soaring single "When You Were Young" to the breakup moaner "For Reasons Unknown," shows these boys don't have to sound like it's still 1982 to make you party like it's 1999. Love 'em or hate 'em, this is bound to sell like porno in prison—let's hope they spend their cash on razors.

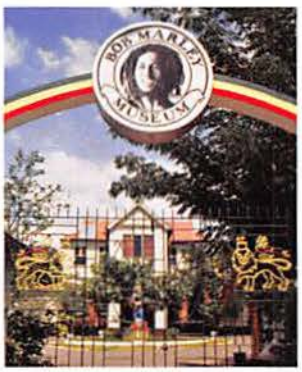
You've got 48 hours to kill on an island known for reggae, jerk chicken, and, um, lush greenery. Sweet.

"You stepped on my foot! Luckily, I can't feel my legs."



1 CRASH
Strawberry Hill Resort
After he was shot in 1976, Bob Marley went into seclusion at this ritzy resort and wrote Natural Mystic. Doubles start at a pricey $590, but that includes food and drink, plus all the famed Blue Mountain java that your bowels can stand. (islandoutpost.com/strawberry_hill)

Rockhouse Hotel
This budget boutique hotel (doubles start at $95) has bungalows with outdoor showers and four-post beds, giving it that roughin'-it-but-high-class vibe. Be sure to take a 30-foot dive off the rocky cliffs before you leave. (rockhousehotel.com)

2 EAT
Scotchies
Skip the airplane gruel and order jerk by the pound from this dirt-cheap roadside stand a mile from the airport. Go easy on the Scotch bonnet pepper sauce or it'll be one long flight home. (Montego Bay, 876-953-8041)

The Ruins
The tables at this fancy-pants restaurant sit right at the base of an amazing 40-foot waterfall in Ocho Rios. Fun fact: In the 1800s a plantation owner forced his wife and her lover into a cave behind the falls and then sealed the cave with a boulder. Creepy! (ruinsjamaica.com)

3 DRINK
The Jungle
Dubbed "the best nightclub in the Caribbean," the Jungle has five bars and a circular dance floor that's bumpin' with tourists from around the world. The dance and reggae beats don't stop till 6 A.M., so stay hydrated with a Red Stripe and catch your breath (or play some ping-pong) on the rooftop. (junglenegril.com)

Shades
This raunchy go-go club in Ocho Rios hosts fetish-friendly "freaky freaky" nights twice a week, but every other night lecherous behavior is thoroughly encouraged. Just don't let the dancers talk you into that—you could head home with a special kind of souvenir. (shadesnightclub.com)

4 SEE
Dunn's River Falls
At these iconic Ocho Rios waterfalls, you can hold on to your heaving stomach while hiking to the top with the masses—or just puss out and get bronzed on the beach below instead. (dunnsriverja.com)

TV's badass Barney is back for season two. Suit up!

Neil Patrick Harris is the best part of anything he's in, whether he's playing a leather-clad fascist in Starship Troopers or a stripper-loving send-up in Harold & Kumar Go to White Castle. But it's his role as an acerbic wingman named Barney in How I Met Your Mother that's keeping the CBS sitcom from becoming another Friends ripoff. With season two beginning this month, the man playing Barney is ready to break out. Again.

The doctor is out.
While other 16-year-olds dealt with their acne in private, Harris was on the cover of teenybopper mags, riding a surge of fame as Doogie Howser, M.D. But instead of becoming another casualty of child stardom, Harris honed his craft in theater. He told the producers of The Surreal Life to go to hell. He refused to be typecast, taking small, image-shattering roles in cable classics like Undercover Brother. "As a kid on TV, I went for the same roles over and over," he says. "If it came down to me or Emmanuel Lewis one more time, I swear I'd kill that little bastard."

Legendary!
Webster can sleep soundly tonight—Harris won't be auditioning against him anytime soon. The cult of Barney is growing, driven by "Barney's Blog" on CBS.com and the legions of fans who have turned lines like "Suit up!" and "Legendary!" into catch phrases. "People used to snicker when I walked by," he says. "But now these guys from Jersey are giving me shout-outs, like, 'Holy shit, you're the man!'"

FYI

CAREER PATH

June 15, 1973 Neil Patrick Harris is born in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

1981 Makes acting debut in The Wizard of Oz. Harris plays Toto.

1989 A little show called Doogie Howser, M.D. begins its four-year run.

2003 Hits Broadway in the sexed-up musical Cabaret.

2004 Makes hilarious self-parodying cameo in Harold & Kumar Go to White Castle.

2005 Returns to TV in How I Met Your Mother.

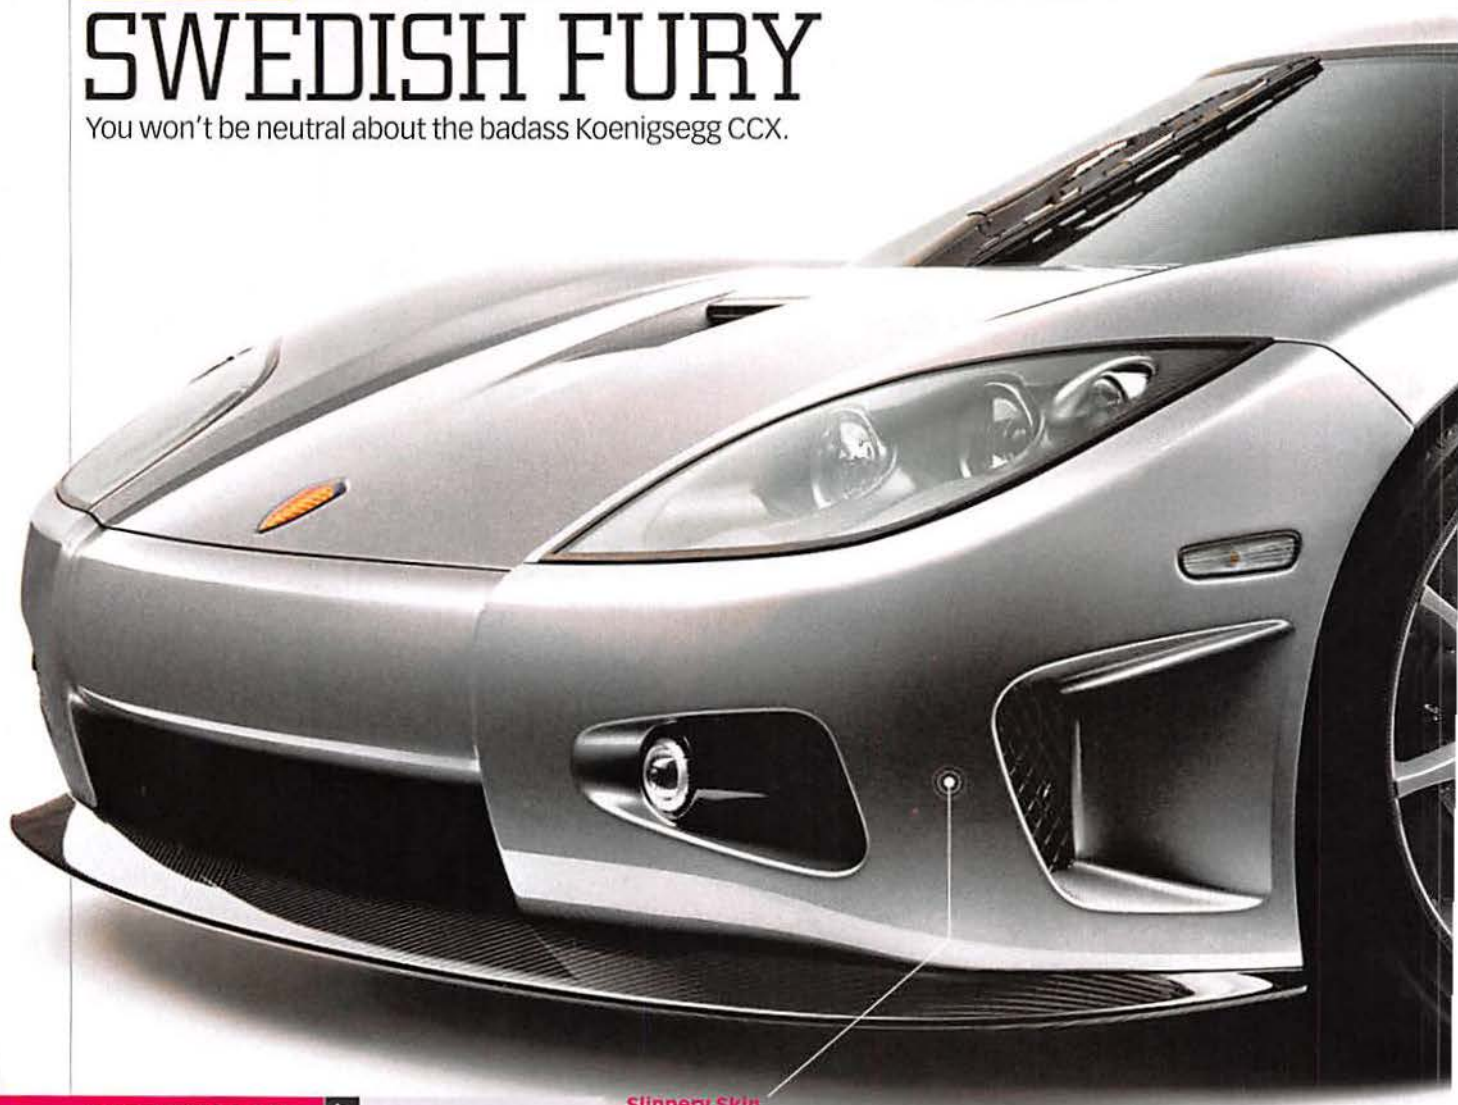
SATISFY YOUR NEED FOR SPEED

SUPERCARS

SWEDISH FURY

You won't be neutral about the badass Koenigsegg CCX.

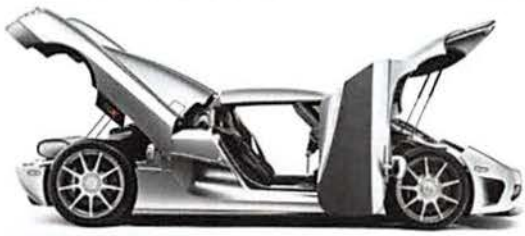


Slippery Skin
The CCX's low drag coefficient (just .30) lets it hit a top speed of 245 mph. It's the second-fastest production car ever, behind the 1,001-horsepower Bugatti Veyron, capable of 253 mph.

KOENIGSEGG CCX

SPEC CHECK

Price: $695,000
Engine: Twin-supercharged 4.7-liter V-8
Horsepower: 806
Torque: 678 lb.-ft.
0-62: 3.2 seconds
Top speed: 245 mph
Dealer: Exotic Cars at Caesars Palace (ecacp.com)

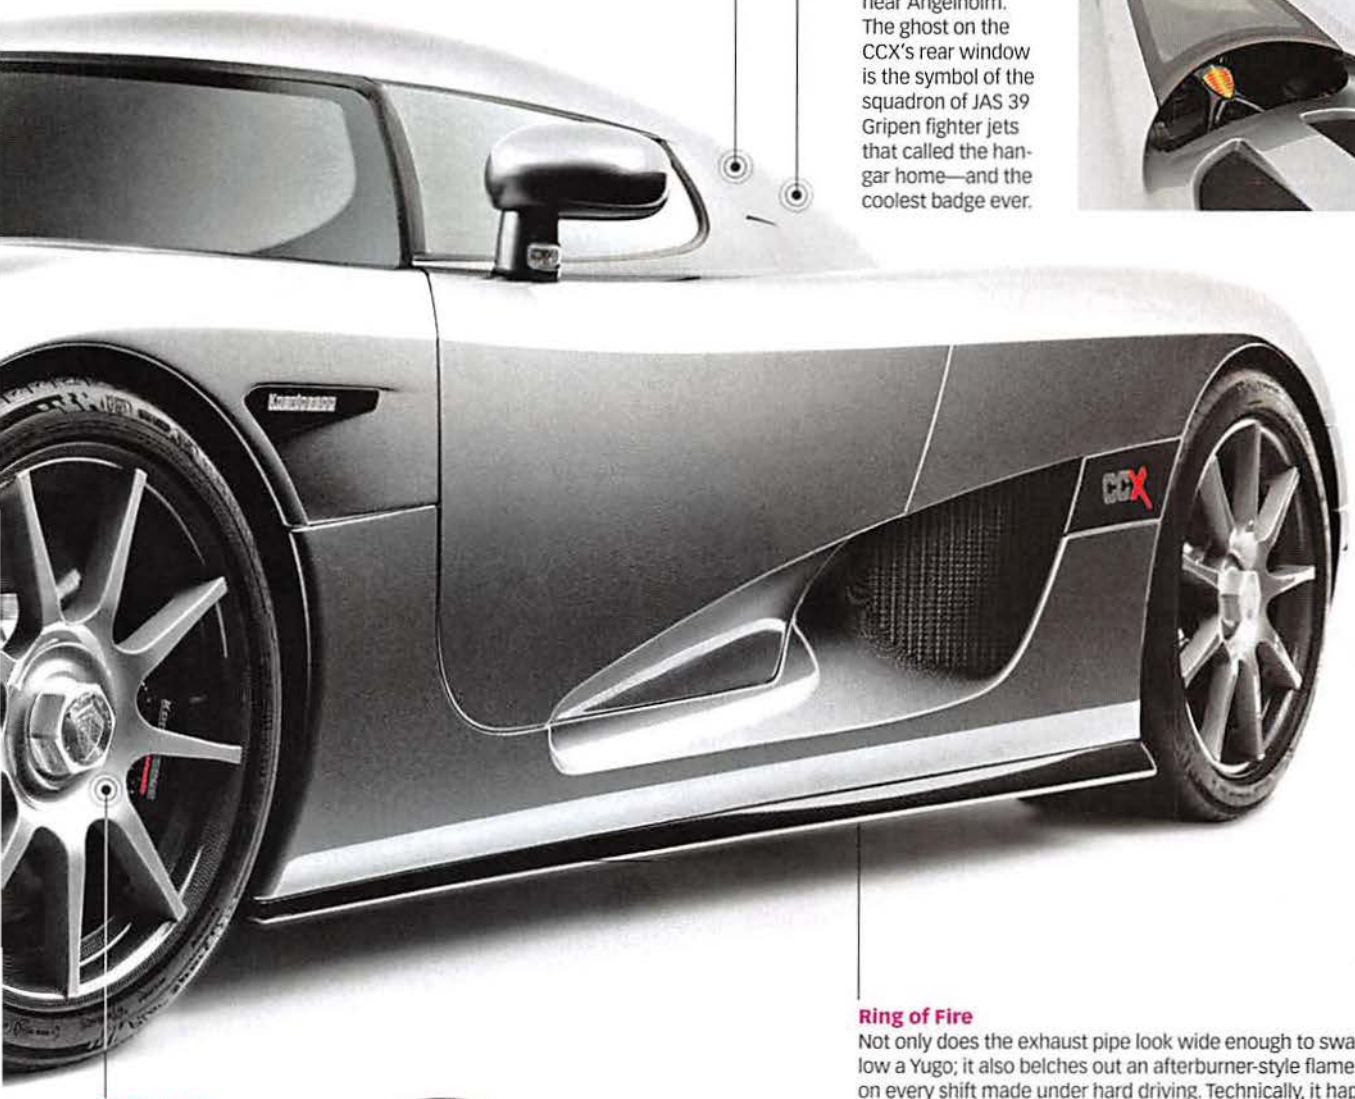


Up, Up, and Away
Because Swedes insist on being different, Koenigsegg designed innovative hatches that pop out of the body, then swing forward and up on gas struts. Nothing says "Your Countach blows" like cooler doors.

SMOOTH OPERATOR

2 Number of Christian von Koenigsegg's eyebrows that are tattoos. He founded his supercar company at age 22, and shortly thereafter lost all his body hair due to a disease called alopecia. At least he's got a sweet ride.

Torn From Jets
Koenigsegg's HQ is an old air force base near Ängelholm. The ghost on the CCX's rear window is the symbol of the squadron of JAS 39 Gripen fighter jets that called the hangar home—and the coolest badge ever.



Take It Off
As if 806 horsepower weren't enough, Koenigsegg created the world's first carbon-fiber wheels. The optional $13,000 set saves 6.6 pounds per rim over the standard magnesium shoes.

Ring of Fire
Not only does the exhaust pipe look wide enough to swallow a Yugo; it also belches out an afterburner-style flame on every shift made under hard driving. Technically, it happens because the exhaust torches fuel that's not burned off during the momentary drop in combustion, but we like to think it's because the CCX is establishing dominance.

THE A-LIST

CADDY MACK

On two wheels or four, BMX hero Mat Hoffman always goes big.

Tell us about your ride.
I got the 1972 Fleetwood Limo because I needed room after I had my second kid. Cadillac only made about 1,000 of them, but I found one in Chicago. It's just under 23 feet long and barely fits in my garage. It just floats down the road. I couldn't have dreamed up a better car to roll in.

Have you done anything to spruce her up?
I customized the inside to give the kids a little playroom in the back. I've got two DVD players, one up front and one in the rear, so they can watch movies while I listen to my music in the front. The front grill and the goddess hood ornament are custom, too. The goddess gives it more style. You just aim her down the center of the road and let her lead.

The '72 isn't your only Caddy though, right?
I have a 1997 Seville, but my first was a 1960 Coupe DeVille. I got that car when I was 17, and I still have it. I could fit eight bikes in the trunk and eight riders inside, so we would roll to each spot. It was a funny-lookin' scene.

Seems like you're loyal to the brand.
Caddies just have so much style. When you sit in one, it's like putting on your favorite T-shirt. It just fits, you know.

GANG WARFARE

America's New Gang Menace

Mara Salvatrucha, the world's deadliest street gang, wants to kill your mom.

Just how nasty are these guys? According to FBI agent Robert Clifford, founding director of the FBI's MS-13 National Gang Task Force, "MS-13 and the 18th Street Gang, their major rivals, are perhaps the most violent gangs in the United States. The Latin Kings, biker gangs, the Bloods—those gangs use a little more discernment in their criminal activity. Whereas with the MS-13, part of their constitution is to attack a rival gang member whenever or wherever they see him." To make things worse, a lot of them are professional killers, having picked up their merciless mentality and small unit tactics while fighting the Salvadoran government as leftist guerrillas. Imagine a bunch of L.A. liberals who actually know how to fight for their political beliefs!

The first street gang to deserve its own FBI fan club. In December 2004 the fed-up Feds created the MS-13 National Gang Task Force. "It was unprecedented for us to do this," says Clifford. "We saw a spike in MS-13–related homicides, utilization of rape as enforcement, malicious wounding, like cutting off rival gang members' fingers with machetes, the whole spectrum." In August 2005 the Feebs noticed the gang had stepped up its game. The FBI says it discovered that an MS-13 clique in Guatemala ordered gang members in Texas to travel to Madison, Wisconsin. There they allegedly ran a shoplifting crime spree at local drugstores and shipped the plunder to a shady Kuwaiti named Eyad Suleiman in Louisville, Kentucky to fence the goods. "And that's not just gang activity," says Clifford, "that's transnational organized crime."

MS-13 gangsters are sworn to attack rivals on sight.

How do you spot the world's most dangerous gangbangers? Massive MS-13 tattoos sprayed across their foreheads in five-inch gothic lettering make many members hard to miss. The "Devil's Pitchfork," index finger and pinkie pointing out of a closed fist, crops up as well as the Greek masks for comedy and drama. "The masks stand for 'laugh today, cry tomorrow,'" says Clifford. "It's a philosophy that exists in this gang that you do what you want right now because tomorrow you'll probably be dead."

They know how to silence their critics.
In July 2003 two MS-13 members stabbed and killed Brenda Paz, a pregnant 17-year-old former member of MS-13. Fishermen found her body on the bank of the Shenandoah River near Woodstock, Virginia. When the gang learned Paz had turned into an FBI informant, they slit her throat so deeply that she was nearly decapitated. In December 2004, MS-13 members attacked a bus in Honduras with machine guns, killing 28 innocent people. A note left at the scene of the atrocity stated that the attack was carried out to protest, of all things, the death penalty.

MS-13 gangs operate in 33 states, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Mexico, and Canada.

Why tattooed killers love baby formula.
"Gangs like MS-13 are professional shoplifters. They can pull in $100,000 a week fencing stolen goods," says Lou Savelli, a former NYPD detective and the founder of the NYPD's Citywide Anti Gang Enforcement unit. "There's a connection between street gangs and Middle Eastern grocery stores. Things like pharmaceuticals and baby formula are big sellers." Gang life isn't all booze and bling. "Most gang members don't lead the kind of lives we think they do," says Savelli. "They're generally extremely poor and living day to day." The next time some kid with MS-13 tatted on his face asks for your case of Gerber, hand that shit over.

BASICS

MS-13

Their origin: Immigrants from El Salvador started MS-13 in the early 1980s in Los Angeles' MacArthur Park.
Who's in it: Homicidal Central American immigrants with a penchant for machetes.
Their numbers: The FBI believes there are 60,000 members spread out among 33 states and Central America.
The name: MS-13 stands for Mara Salvatrucha 13. "Mara" for "gang," "Salva" for El Salvador, "trucha" for "fear us," and "13" to signify the letter M (the 13th letter of the alphabet), a tribute to its early alliance with La Eme, the Mexican mafia.
Their business: Running protection rackets, fencing stolen goods, distributing narcotics, buying sensibly priced khakis, and giving each other pedicures.

IN EL SALVADOR THE GROWTH OF MS-13 HAS MOBILIZED SOME CITIZENS TO FORM "SOCIAL CLEANSING" DEATH SQUADS.

WAR

Wing Man

Dropping in on evildoers just got a whole lot easier for Special Ops.

Flying a plane behind enemy lines for a combat parachute drop isn't always an option. Soon America's black ops will zoom into hostile territory at an estimated 250 mph using this carbon-fiber glider. Developed by German company ESG, this fixed-wing parachute system, code-named Gryphon, will feature twin mini-turbojets, enabling commandos to bail from a plane at 33,000 feet carrying 200 pounds of gear and soar for up to 120 miles. Once the commando reaches his LZ, he deploys his chute and lands safely. The only downside for soldiers will be concealing the six-foot-wide mono-wing upon landing. On the plus side, they get to work out their frustration by killing some baddies.

Deadly Dirigible

Delivering packages and war by 2010.

A fat contract from DARPA led Aeros to develop the Aeroscraft, a blimplike airship capable of traveling 14,000 miles and dumping up to 5,000 soldiers and their vehicles without needing an airstrip. Tamer jobs for the craft include luxury travel, shipping, and transporting biohazard material to New Jersey.

STARS

It's a Frickin' Laser Beam

The Air Force gets lit.

Ask the government about their Starfire Optical Range, tucked away at Kirtland Air Force Base in the New Mexico desert, and they'll probably just drone on and on about how the installation helps astronomers properly focus their telescopes through atmospheric interference by firing a sodium laser deep into the sky. The fact that the Starfire paves the way for a satellite-sizzling death beam with a range of 260 miles is just a little side benefit.

Uncle Sam Is Tapping Your Ass

George W. Bush and his NSA boys are watching you, but who's watching them?

The issue in a flaming nutshell: domestic spying. Last December President Bush confirmed the existence of a government-sponsored wiretapping program that he put in motion following the 9/11 terrorist attacks. Since 2002 the National Security Agency has monitored select international e-mails and phone calls made between the U.S. and foreign countries. In other words, if Uncle Sam suspects either party on the line to be a terrorist monkey puppet, the spooks listen in on the conversation.

But that doesn't mean spying on taxpayers is a new development. The Feds made the practice kosher with the passage of FISA, the 1978 Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. FISA set the ground rules for eavesdropping by granting spy warrants in supersecret FISA court. As long as the Feds could gin up some probable cause, the FISA court would make listening in on phone calls as legal as accidentally peppering a lawyer's face with bird shot. Bush, however, authorized the NSA to go ahead and listen in without warrants on the grounds that we are at war with terrorists and don't have time for a lot of red tape, even secret legal red tape. The idea is to generate real-time intelligence on terrorist cells. Once calls are traced, the White House can send out a Chinook full of SEALs to illustrate the dangers of supporting jihadist doctrine. Opponents of the wiretap program say it's illegal as defined by FISA laws. Supporters of the program say Congress granted the president this right when the Hill authorized him to use "all necessary and appropriate force" to fight the war on terror. Both sides make legitimate points. Which side are you on?

[Pro]

George W. Bush, 43rd President of the U.S.A.
"Even though you hear the words 'domestic spying,' these are not phone calls within the United States. It's a phone call of a known Al Qaeda suspect, making a phone call into the United States...If they're making phone calls into the United States, we need to know why—to protect you."

General Michael Hayden, CIA director and former NSA director
"Had this program been in effect prior to 9/11, it is my professional judgment that we would have detected some of the 9/11 Al Qaeda operatives in the United States, and we would have identified them as such...This program is focused. It's targeted. It's very carefully done. You shouldn't worry."

[Con]

Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee
"The administration's continuing position on the NSA's surveillance program rejects the historical constitutional practice of judicial approval of warrants before wiretapping and denigrates the constitutional authority and responsibility of the Congress."

Anthony D. Romero, executive director of the ACLU
"President Bush may believe he can authorize spying on Americans without judicial or Congressional approval, but this program is illegal, and we intend to put a stop to it. The current surveillance of Americans is a chilling assertion of presidential power that has not been seen since the days of Richard Nixon."

Male Cheerleaders
Well, we'd like to think they do it to look up female cheerleaders' skirts, but, sadly, that's not the case. No, these guys cheer simply because they have too much fuckin' pep, and it's high time for that shit to stop.

All right, we concede that scarfing down 50-some hot dogs or 552 oysters or 36 cockroaches—yes, these are actual records—faster than a host of other iron-gulleted neo-hillbillies sharing the stage with you requires no small amount of endurance. So does repeatedly getting kicked in the nuts, and that's way more fun to watch.

How to Buy a Kick-Ass Dog

Aggressive-breed expert Michael Kennedy trots out five fantastic hounds. And one crazy one.

1 American Pit Bull Terrier ($500–$1,000)
Pros: Loyal, loving, strong, agile, and easily trained. Plus, their looks alone scare the crap out of people.
Cons: High-energy, so they need lots of exercise. Terrible rep—some cities have even banned them. napbta.org

2 Bullmastiff ($1,000–$1,800)
Pros: Even-tempered, low-maintenance, great guard dog.
Cons: Slow to train. Large size (males reach 130 pounds) makes them hell to transport, feed, and take to the vet.
clubs.akc.org/aba

4 Rottweiler ($500–$1,000)
Pros: The ultimate guard dog. Smart, strong, and versatile, Rotties can be trained to do any task. Cons: Prone to bullying, they can get into trouble if not well-trained. Sometimes denied at hotels. amrottclub.org

5 German Shepherd ($500–$900)
Pros: Great guarding abilities. Eager to please and willing to work once you establish dominance. Cons: Destructive inbreeding and overbreeding have made it difficult to find a stable, healthy, quality animal. gsdca.org

3 Dalmatian ($600–$800)
Pros: Strong, fast, and alert, and women dig them.
Cons: Overbreeding has caused serious temperament problems like fear-biting and predatory aggression. Unless you're a firefighter, reconsider. thedca.org

6 Rhodesian Ridgeback ($500–$1,200)
Pros: Athletic, loyal, and brave watchdog and hunting partner, the breed also goes by African Lion Hound.
Cons: Strong-willed and slow to mature. Leave 'em home alone and they'll shred the couch. rrcus.org

INSTRUCTION

Canine Control

Use Kennedy's top tips to master your beast—not the other way around.

Set limits and enforce them.
Know where your pup will sleep and where you'll housebreak him. Set rules, and discipline him every time he misbehaves with consistent, specific reprimands. Reward good behavior, too.

Establish dominance.
Alpha dogging starts as possessiveness. Handle your pup when he eats and plays with toys. If he tenses up or growls, scold him and remove the item. This shows that you're in control.

Treat your puppy like he's grown.
Never do anything with him as a pup that you wouldn't do when he's an adult. Otherwise he won't understand why all of a sudden at five months—and 100 pounds—he can't climb on your lap.

Don't raise a wuss.
When your dog is fearful, speak confidently while moving him toward the object of his fear. Also, take him out to meet as many dogs and people as possible. And please, don't carry him around.

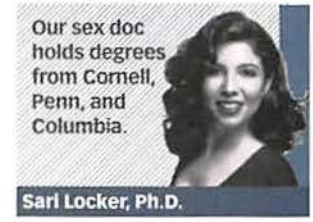
FEMALE STUDIES

Sex Edge

Sari Locker, Ph.D., improves your carnal knowledge.

Q My girlfriend only has orgasms from oral sex. How can I get her to orgasm during regular intercourse?

A When a woman pleasures herself, she often uses a circular rubbing motion on her clitoris. That's the part of her you'll need to reach during intercourse. Get on top, and before you enter her, part her labia with your fingers to expose her clitoris. Glide your penis inside her, tilting your pelvis close to hers so she can rub her clitoris on your body. Instead of an in-out thrust, grind and use a rocking motion. Alternative: If she's on top, she can control where she rubs for best clitoral stimulation. You can also easily stimulate her clitoris with your hand, or suggest she do it herself—that's the only way some women can orgasm during intercourse. Also, not every woman needs to orgasm from intercourse every time. Perhaps for your girlfriend, your oral skills will work just fine.



Our sex doc holds degrees from Cornell, Penn, and Columbia.

Sari Locker, Ph.D.

Q Not that my penis is small or anything, but how can I get my girlfriend to feel tighter during sex?

A If you feel like you've pulled your M3 into the center of a three-car garage, the following variations on some common sex positions can snug things up.

(1) Missionary: She tilts her pelvis down, aiming her vaginal opening toward the mattress, and holds her bent knees up toward her chest while keeping her head elevated on pillows. This will increase pressure against the inner walls of her vagina as well as shorten her vaginal canal.

(2) Sitting: You stand or kneel while she sits on the edge of the bed, sofa, or countertop. When you enter her, you'll be going up at a slight angle, so your penis should hit the top wall of her vagina. You'll feel pressure and tightness as you hit that wall.

(3) Doggy style: Enter her from behind, but open your legs and have her mostly close hers. Then have her angle her body down by resting her head and shoulders flat on the bed. This will help her feel tighter, or you feel bigger...however you prefer to look at it.

Q Are my odds better if my wingman is good-looking or if he's a schlub?

A He should be handsome... and happily married. It should go like this: A woman is drawn to his looks. He mentions his wife while introducing you. You take the hand-off and say how much you admire your friend. Most women are charmed by guys who aren't petrified by marriage, so it's a great opener. Can you close?

POKER TIPS

Resurrect Your Game

Maxim's divine poker expert, Chris "Jesus" Ferguson, explains how to play four tricky hands in Texas Hold 'Em.

Proud owner of five WSOP bracelets

Chris Ferguson

1 Jesus says: My hand* is almost certainly the winner, so I want to get a lot of money in the pot. I'll play it carefully—if I get beat, I'll lose big. I'm going to bet but pay attention to my opponent's moves. If he calls, I'll keep betting on the turn and river cards. But if he raises and keeps betting the turn and river, I may have to lay this one down.

2 Jesus says: I've flopped a monster hand. I've only got jack-high, but it's still a favorite over a pair of aces. I've got a flush draw and a straight draw—there are 15 cards that could come up to make this hand a winner. I want to get a lot of money in the pot, so I would bet, and if my opponent raised, I would re-raise.

3 Jesus says: This is a very difficult hand to play, even though it seems like a winner. It's probably the best at the table, but there's a chance my opponent might be holding a higher pair or a third five, especially if he's bet from early position. I'd bet, and if my opponent raised, I'd call, but I wouldn't like it. Still, I may end up catching his bluff.

4 Jesus says: I'd play this hand fast and bet early. I'm hoping my opponent has a strong hand—an ace with a good kicker, like a king or queen. From his perspective he's got a great hand, so he'll put in a lot of money. But a pair of aces still can't beat three of a kind, and the more I get him to put in the pot, the more I win in the end.

3 The Intern Promise him the intern chalice—an actual job!—but always after the next project. This once-neutral pawn will do your busywork and make you look great.

4 The Slacker His chatter wastes your time. Tell him you need help with a really important project... that means working nights and weekends. He'll move on.

5 The Sexpot Hook up and she's your enemy. So attract her, then turn cold. She'll chase you, making you look like an alpha male... and exciting other office females.

6 The HR Dame Let the Gossip leak the idea that you admire her. Ply her with a seemingly coincidental gift, like concert tix you can't use. Someday she'll return the favor.

7 The Hard-Ass When he's around, make a big show of hitting deadlines and doing everything by the book. Otherwise he'll quickly become your worst enemy.

8 The Boss' People Only morons nakedly aim to please the man himself. Instead, use your charm to win over the Boss' Assistant and the Boss' Boss.

9 The IT Guy Befriend him. You'll get tech help—and learn how to intercept e-mails.

10 The Has-Been Steer clear of his bitter ramblings. He'll be retired or dead soon enough.

Robert Greene's latest book, The 33 Strategies of War, is out now. Read his blog at powerseductionandwar.com. E-mail him at robertgreene@maxim.com.

Know some good insults in sign

1 "Bite me!"
Make the shape of an open claw with your right hand next to your face and close it by touching your fingers to your thumb ("bite"). Then point to yourself ("me"). Or whatever you want the other person to bite.

2 "Your mom!"
With your fingers together and your palm facing away from you, hold your right hand up in front of your chest and push it out ("your"). Then spread your fingers and tap your thumb to your chin ("mom").

3 "You bastard!"
Make the sign for b with your right hand (fingers together, thumb in front of open palm). Face your palm to your left and bounce your index finger against your forehead. Smile like you mean it.

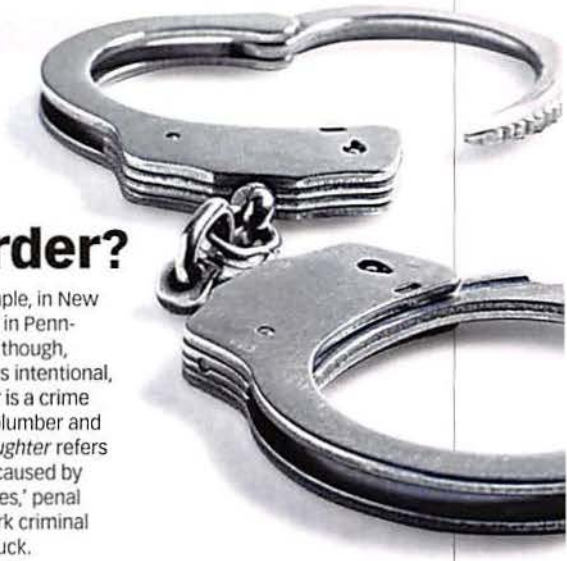
4 "Talk to the hand!"
Turn your head to the side and throw your arm out with your palm up in the other person's face, like you're making a stiff-arm. Learn to spell out "Stedman" and you can be deaf Oprah for Halloween!

LEGAL EASE

Q What's the difference between the degrees of murder?



A Depends what state you're in. For example, in New York first-degree murder is offing a cop; in Pennsylvania it's any intentional killing. In general, though, there are three basic levels. Plain ol' murder is intentional, premeditated killing. Voluntary manslaughter is a crime of passion (catching your girlfriend with the plumber and snuffing them both). And involuntary manslaughter refers to accidental but reckless killings, like those caused by hunting accidents. "As you go down in 'degrees,' penal time also typically goes down," adds New York criminal defense attorney A. Adam Mehrfar. Er, good luck.

LAUGH LESSONS

Stand Up and Deliver

Charlie, Joe, and John guide your unfunny ass through a comedy set.

1 Do: Take Your Time
JH: Guys go right up to the mike and are immediately talking. That's too fast. It's like if you're at a strip club and a stripper comes right up and goes, "I need money for a dance." Whoa! First you need to say, "Hi, my name's Cinnamon."

2 Don't: Lead With the New Material
CM: Never put it up front. I have certain points where I can try it. If it doesn't work, I've got something before it and after it that will.

3 Do: Respect the Ladies
JH: Drunk women are the worst hecklers. You can't use any heckling jujitsu, because they just get more pissed off. With guys, you slam them and they're quiet. They're thinking about beating your ass in the parking lot, but they shut up.

4 Don't: Hold Back
JR: I want to give the best show I can. I call it the Joe DiMaggio principle. Late in his career, someone asked him why he would still play so hard. He said, "Somewhere out there in that crowd is someone who hasn't seen Joe DiMaggio play, and I don't want to disappoint them." Fucking A.

5 Do: Tape It
JR: Listening to recordings of shitty sets can motivate you more than listening to great sets. Bombing is important. You gotta feel that pain. It's like sucking 1,000 dicks in front of your mother. You don't want to do that twice.

6 Don't: Bother Eddie Murphy
CM: The first time I ever bombed, I called my brother. He asked me, "Who do you think you are?" I said, "Charlie." He said, "Me, Richard Pryor, Martin Lawrence, Chris Rock, we all got booed. So I'm going to ask again, Who do you think you are? Don't ever call me with dumb shit like this again." Then he hung up the phone.

THINK YOU'RE FUNNY?

SIX-PACK! It's as easy as exercising nonstop (and eating like a monk).

GET RIPPED

Cage Fighter Workout

You don't win 41 MMA bouts with a beer belly. These gut-busters helped UFC welterweight champ Matt Hughes forge a fighter's midsection.

Broom Handle Ab Twist

1 Run an exercise bar across your shoulders. Bend over a bit, a couple inches from straight up.

2 Twist from side to side using nothing but your abs to make the rotation happen.

3 Do three sets of 30 reps. It'll hurt, but burn it out—it's great for flexibility and strength.

Hanging Ab Crunch

1 Slip into hanging ab straps and point your toes out about three feet in front of your torso.

2 Keeping still, contract your abs to bring your knees up to your chest. Lower them and repeat.

3 Do three sets of 15 reps. Wanna hit your obliques? Lift your knees to the side as shown.

Decline Ab Twist With Medicine Ball

1 Sit up in a decline bench. Your partner tosses a medicine ball across your body to your left.

2 Keeping your abs tense, reach out for the ball. Rotate back a little as you catch it.

3 Crunch your abs as you heave it back. Switch sides after 25 reps. Do two to three sets. Don't puke.

COOK HER PANTS OFF

Six Ingredients to Seduction

Nothing guarantees a night of amóre like legendary chef Mario Batali's dish of spicy pasta.

There are many ways to woo a woman in the kitchen, but if I had to choose the best, it would probably involve pasta. Easy, sexy, and molto Italiano. What says more about your Soave Bolla freak-on than heirloom tomatoes at their peak, chili for heat on several levels, just a hint of garlic, and a slow, deliberate grating of the king of cheeses, Parmigiano-Reggiano, for rhythm and a touch of foreshadow? Buying is key...tomatoes in late fall, fragrant fresh basil, good spaghetti like De Cecco or Barilla, and the gig is up.—MB

Spaghetti con Pomodoro

Ingredients:

4 Tbs. extra-virgin olive oil
1 clove garlic, thinly sliced
½ tsp. hot chili flakes
1 pound heirloom tomatoes, chopped into ½-inch cubes, with all the juices
12 basil leaves, torn in half
½ pound spaghetti

Recipe

1. Boil six quarts of water and 2 Tbs. of salt in a large spaghetti pot. Meanwhile, heat a 10- to 12-inch sauté pan over medium heat and add the oil, garlic, and chili flakes. Cook until garlic is golden brown, about one minute.

2. Dump tomatoes in sauté pan and bring to a splashy boil (about five minutes). Remove from heat, season with salt and pepper, and set aside.

3. Drop the pasta into the boiling water and cook one minute less than package instructions suggest. Drain the pasta in a colander, toss into the pan with the tomato mixture, and place over medium-high heat.

4. Toss for 30 seconds, add basil, and toss again; pour into a warmed salad bowl. Grate Parmigiano-Reggiano to taste, dim the lights, and serve with two forks. Buon appetito!

To go along with his seven jam-packed New York City restaurants, Batali is hitting Los Angeles to open two new ones with that city's favorite chef, Nancy Silverton. Pizzeria Mozza and Osteria Mozza share the corner of Highland and Melrose. For a huge first, Silverton and Batali plan delivery of their ethereal pizza to a select geo-demo within two miles of the corner.

WINE LIST

Drinking Partners

Name your price; Mario names your wine.*

1 Tasty Bargain Morellino di Scansano from Maremma Tuscany is a sexy cognate to classic Chianti at half the price. The best on the market is La Mozza's I Perazzi, which should retail at about 16 bucks.

2 Midpriced Monster I love a simple Fiano or Greco from Campania, where this dish was arguably born. My faves are Mastroberardino and Feudi di San Gregorio, each in the $20 range.

3 Molto Money Sagrantino di Montefalco from Umbria is a brilliant, dark, brooding, and powerful red. In the hands of Arnaldo Caprai, it becomes a masterpiece of terroir. It'll be $35 to $40 for the Riserva.

SHARP-DRESSED MAN

Office Armor

Command respect—and look damn good—when you clock in.

SUIT UP
Buy these threads and more at duncanquinn.com.

The Tie
More than any other element, the necktie talks. "The tie must dominate, so think contrast," advises Sandy Dumont, author of Power Dressing for Men. A bold blue, red, or yellow with a discrete pattern that doesn't disappear against the suit wins points in the boardroom.

The Details
"Always use collar stays—there's no place in a polished suit for a limp or curling collar." Beyond those, tread lightly. "Only the simplest cuff links and white pocket squares are acceptable. Even then you run the risk of seeming too formal or annoyingly affected."

The Fabric
"Pinstripes may be just the thing young professionals need to augment their credibility." Color-wise, the darker the shade, the more authoritative. But gray signals neutrality and black can be forbidding, so navy blue is your best bet. (Yes, this suit is blue.)

The Shirt
"A crisp white conveys 'high power' more than any other color. But a French or Oxford blue can be as businesslike and more flattering than plain white by giving the face some color. If solids bore you, stick with vertical stripes or subtle textured patterns."

The Pants
"Suit pants need to break perfectly on top of your shoe with enough length in the back to reach the heel without touching the ground. Socks should not be noticed." So the darker and more subtly patterned, the better. Still, don't buy 'em at Kmart.

The Shoes
"Think old money. For a more formal look, go with a classic wingtip or even a cap-toe, which is slightly dressier." For a more casual look, opt for a basic black lace-up, which will make the cut in your place of employment and your place of enjoyment.

HOW TO

Build a Fire

Contrary to popular belief, you don't need a stack of newspapers and two phone books to build a sex-inducing indoor inferno.

1 Good wood
For the most combustible woodpile, get logs of varying diameters: six-to eight-inch for the foundation, four- to six- and two- to four-inch for the upper layers. As for wood type, Ashley Eldridge of the Chimney Safety Institute of America recommends dense woods like oak and hickory at the bottom and a fast burner like pine up top.

2 Sticks and cones
If you don't have kindling, make some by chipping corners off logs with a hatchet. You can also add fruitwoods or cedar for a hint of sexy musk, but the smell will be faint at best. Finally, fill a paper lunch bag with extra-dry pinecones (the scales should be fully extended), which will pop and spark as they burn.

3 Tower of power
Lay the three fattest logs on the fireplace floor with two inches between them to keep oxygen stoking the flames. Perpendicular to those, stack three medium logs. Continue building up, using smaller pieces and crisscrossing with each layer. Toss your kindling and cone sack on top and play your girl some jazz flute.

4 Flame on
Now you need to drive out cold air that's trapped in the chimney so it doesn't tamp down your flame. Twist a sheet of newspaper into a torch, light it, and hold it under the flue. When you hear a whoosh, the chimney has begun drafting. Now lower the torch to the bag, which should ignite with a flash. Watch the fire burn—and your woman melt.

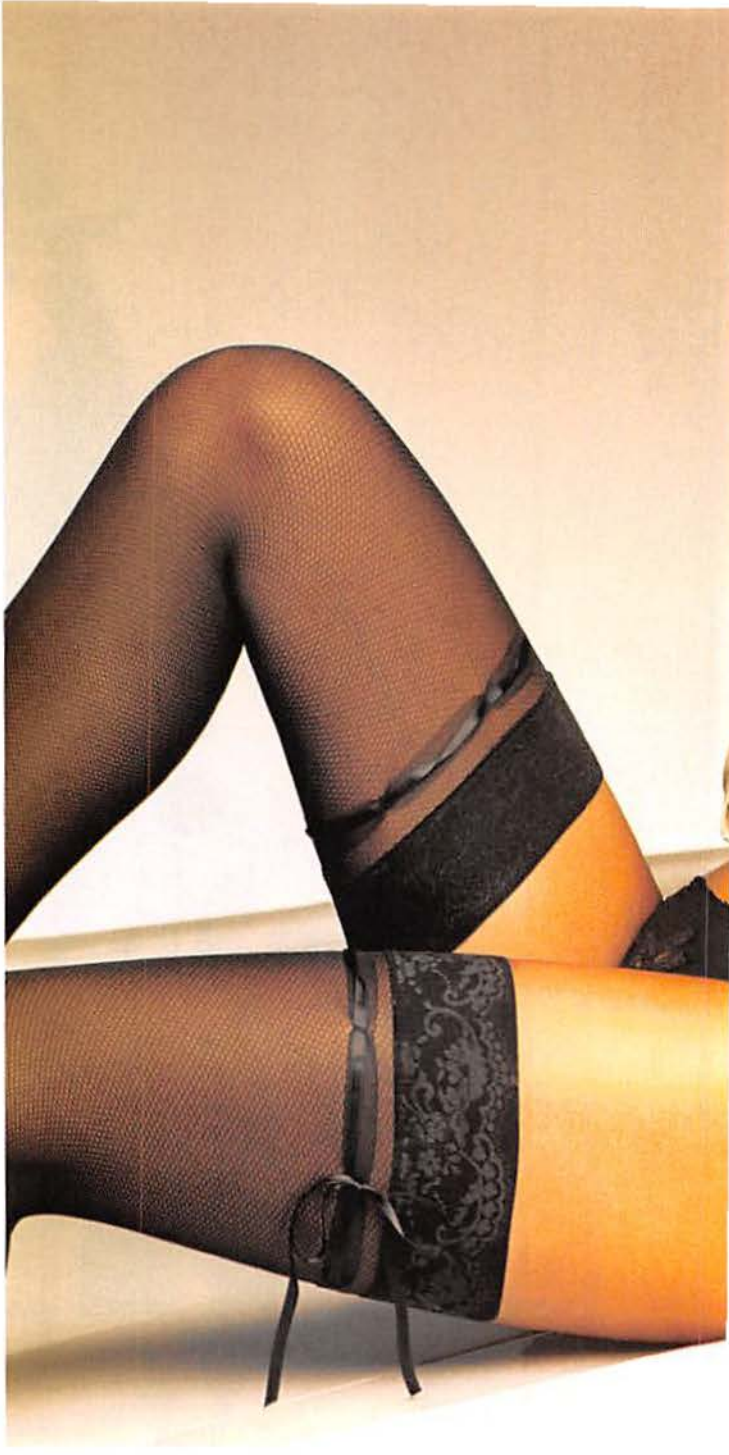
Dressed to kill... Femme Fatale Vanessa Minnillo will have you begging for mercy.

By Jessica Hundley



Right now there's a veritable army of paparazzi waiting for you outside of this hotel bar. What about them pisses you off the most?
When they fabricate a story. That drives me crazy. The reality is that the truth doesn't sell. They went to lunch, they had a good time, they looked happy. Who wants to buy that? So they exaggerate the details. It makes me cry; it really does. People say, "Don't let it get to you," but I'm human. If I was acting in a certain way, then I'd have to deal with the consequences. But when it's like, "That didn't even happen"—that's when it's infuriating, because now it's in print and it's their word against mine. I'm 25 years old, and I like to have a drink once in a while. But I don't need to see a picture of me everywhere with a drink in my hand with a headline that says I was giving someone a lap dance!

Do you miss your privacy?
I don't have a private life. People don't realize how powerful the media is. It's a beast. It's there to build you up and take you down. It's kind of bittersweet, you know. Like right now we're doing an interview for a magazine that I love. You need to do press, but you don't ask for it to take over your life. I understand that when I go to work, the paparazzi will be there. But I don't understand why they need to be down my back when I go out of my apartment at midnight to get some ice cream. She went to Baskin Robbins and got two scoops of mint chocolate chip! Dunt dun duh!

Do you feel misunderstood?
I'm feeling more so now. At work I don't put on an act; my job is me being me. It's like a reality show, because for an hour a day I'm live and it's just me. My whole life I've been scrutinized because I'm ethnic. My mother is Polynesian, and my dad is Irish-Italian. So I've had to prove myself from the inside out.

How so?
Well, I grew up in Charleston, South Carolina—a good-ol'-boy town—and all my friends had blonde hair and blue eyes, and there I was, looking like I look. People would look at me and think, She must have a dark side. I've had to learn that you can't please all the people all the time.

'You know, I'm 25 years old. I like to have a drink once in a while.'

Here's your chance to set the record straight about who you really are.
I'm strong, smart, and hard-working. I love the photos for this article, the whole Bonnie and Clyde theme. In a way that's what all this feels like. Whether it's my family, my friends, my man, or just myself—we're battling this crazy world and trying to get through it with a smile.

Who is the best interview you've ever done?
I can't think of one, but some moments stick out. Sitting down with Robert Redford, who was wearing the tightest jeans, looking handsome as ever. That man has an aura. Watching Clive Davis sitting at a piano with Barry Manilow in a suite at the Mandarin Oriental...and we're all singing "Mandy" together. That was a moment. Having Jim Carrey tell me I was funny. Seeing Beyoncé and Madonna getting nervous backstage.

What's the one thing that people don't understand about celebrities?
That they're just as normal and down-to-earth as everyone else. They wake up in the morning, go to bed at night, and have bad days. When the Olsen twins were on, we asked them, "When was the last time you cried?" And they were like, "This morning."

How strange is it to go from reading the news to actually becoming it?
When I do interviews with other celebrities, I never ask questions I wouldn't answer. I don't want to pry in anyone's life. I try to reword or pass it on to another journalist or nix it altogether. You have to remember your audience, too—13-year-old girls watch TRL. But it's really hard for me to do what I do and keep my integrity and values and morals and ethics.

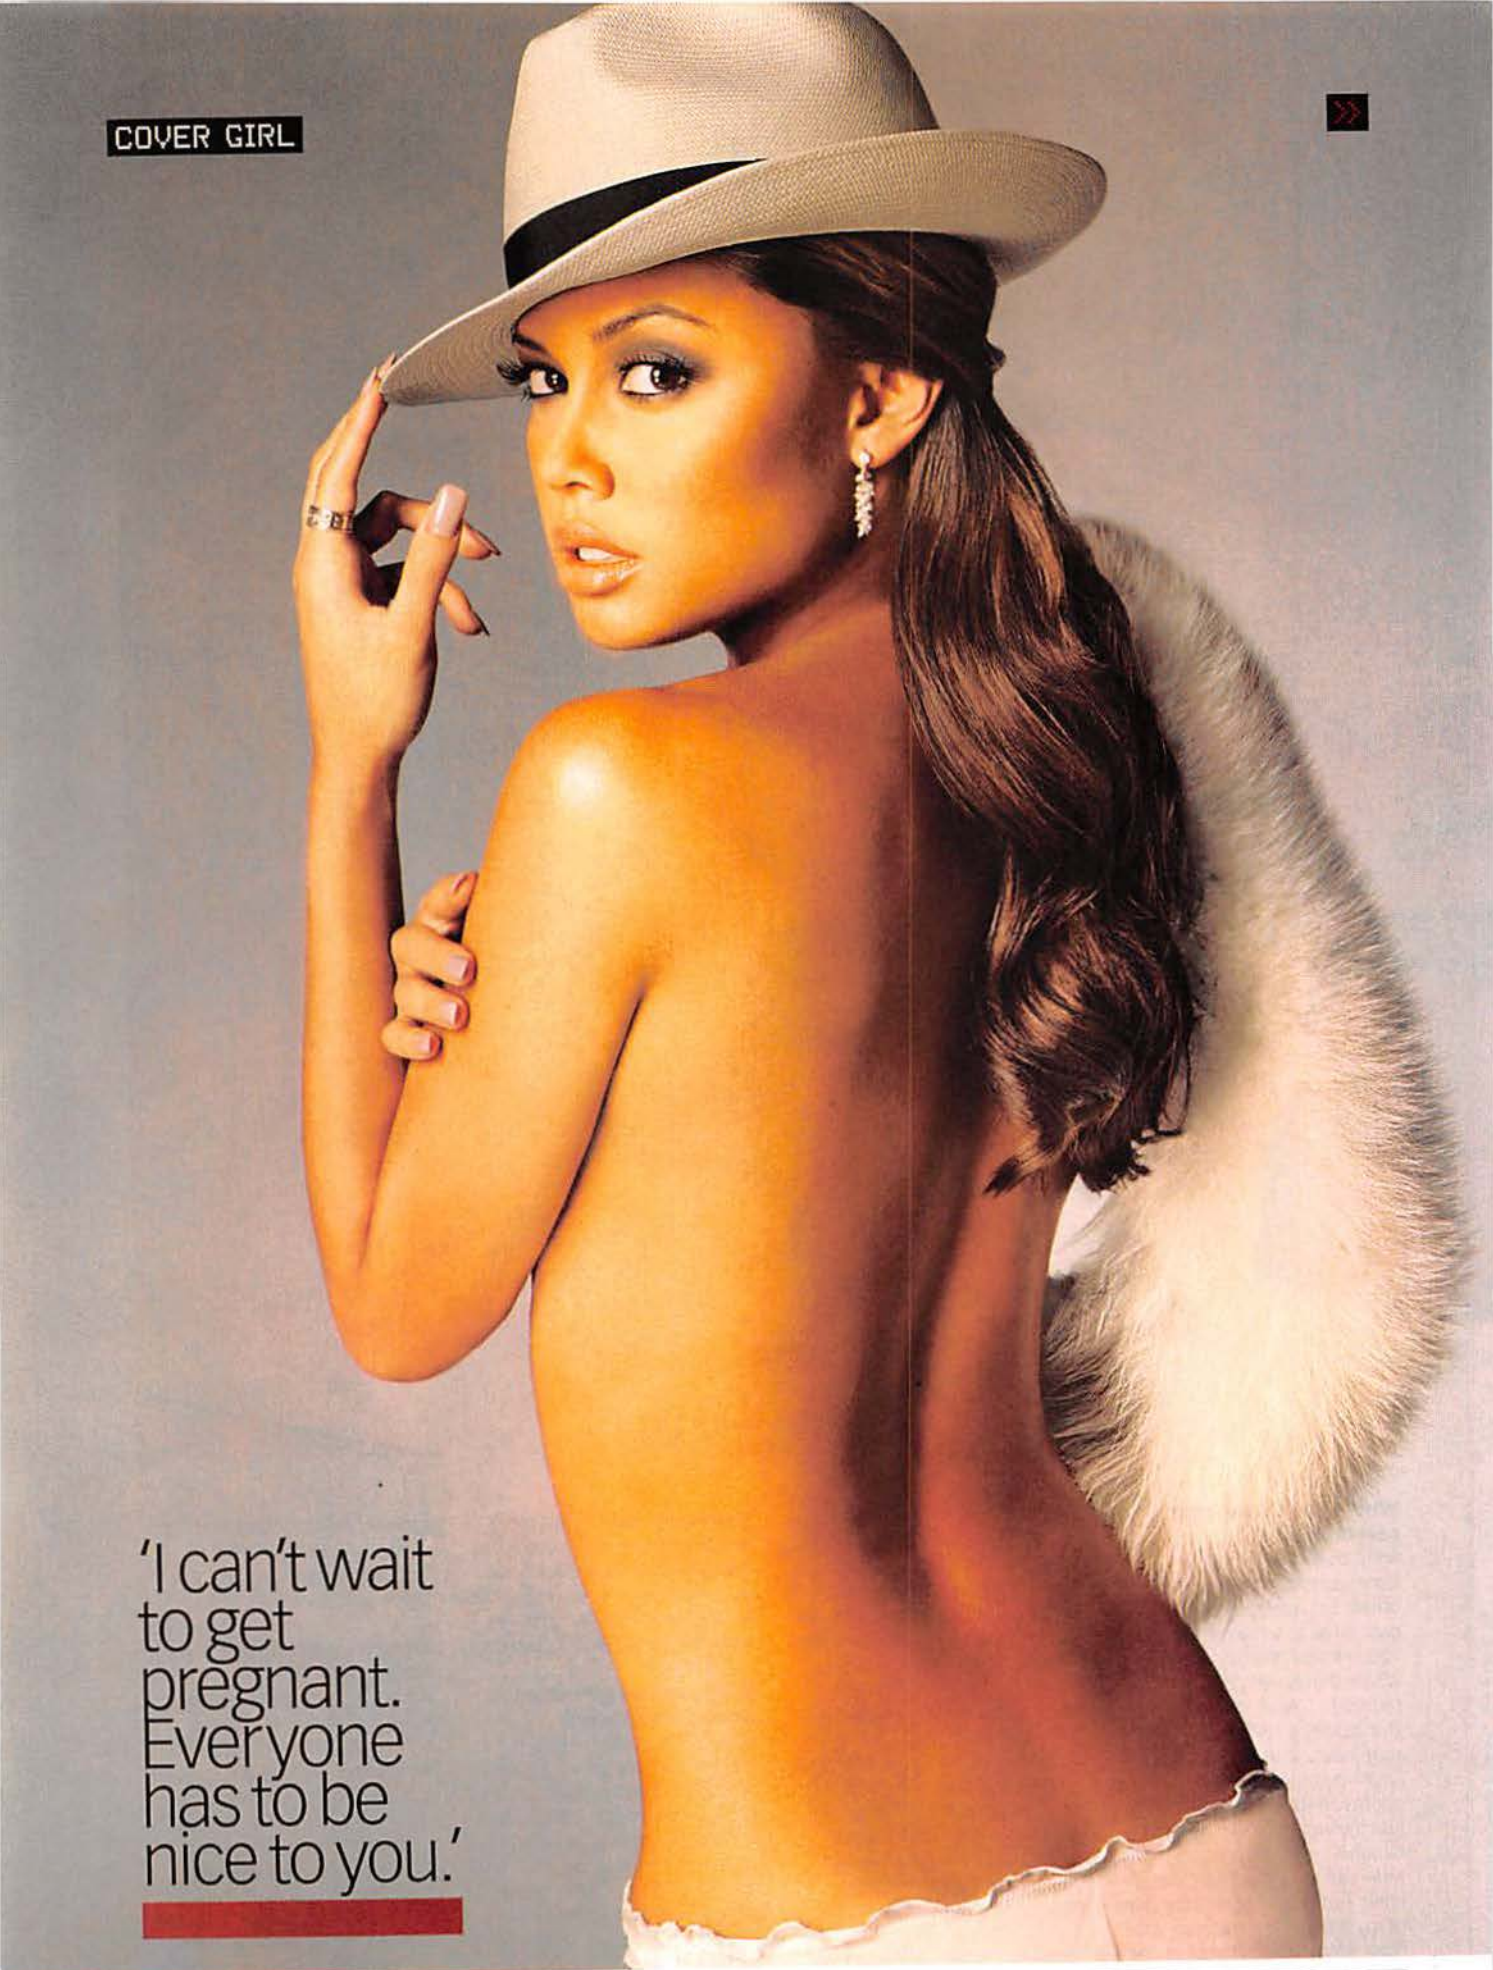
styling: Erin Kurtin; set design: Bradley Garlock at Judy Casey

Where do you see your career heading?
Right now MTV and Entertainment Tonight are my priorities. I'm not going to look past them to see what's next. I don't know. You never know where things can go. When I moved to L.A. at 19, I was like, The last thing I want to do is a soap opera, and I never want to host—hosting is boring, and soap operas are cheesy. Naturally, my first job was The Bold and the Beautiful, and I loved it. Right after that I was hosting. On one hand, I can't wait to find the man of my dreams, get married, and have a family. I can't wait to get pregnant, because I can let it all hang out. You don't have to be perfect. Everyone is nice to you. People give up their seats for you. But on the other, I might get that movie deal and find that that's my bag.

How soon do you want to get married?
I don't know. Someone who says, "I love you, I want you, I need you, but I'm just not ready," will never be ready—and they're probably not the right one for you. Men are going to hate hearing this, but women have a sixth sense, especially about love. Men, it takes a little more convincing. They'll think, I love her, but I really want to hang out with the boys tonight and see the game. But I'm not hating—I'd turn down a night out with the man for courtside seats any day!

If women have intuition, what do men have?
Honesty. Guys don't know how to sugarcoat things. It's all black or white—which is good sometimes, even though it might hurt. Guys know more about women than you think they do, and I love them for that. It's such a game. Women tell me to play hard to get, but I don't know if I always agree. I might be busy, but as soon as my man needs me, I'm there. Guys like a little bit of a chase, but not so much of a chase that it's work.

Which town is better: L.A. or New York?
I love L.A., but I love New York more. Ironically, I've found a tighter niche in New York. New York is like, How are you? I like you. You're cool. Let's hang out. I'm going to miss that if I leave. I'll have to eventually, because I'm not raising a family here. I don't want my four-year-old on Canal Street hawking fake Louis Vuitton: "Yo, this stuff is real! I just got it off the truck, playa!"



'I can't wait to get pregnant. Everyone has to be nice to you.'

WANT TO LIVE TO 130?

The average life expectancy of the American male is 75.2 puny years. Come January, 55,000 of you will have died from boozing, 629,701 from heart disease or cancer, and 69,257 from accidents like getting T-boned by a bus or struck by lightning. But even death's skeletal kiss means squat to dudes, as 69 percent carry gut kegs, 28 percent have high blood pressure, and 24 percent still suck cancer sticks. But no worries—light up, take a swig, and read on.

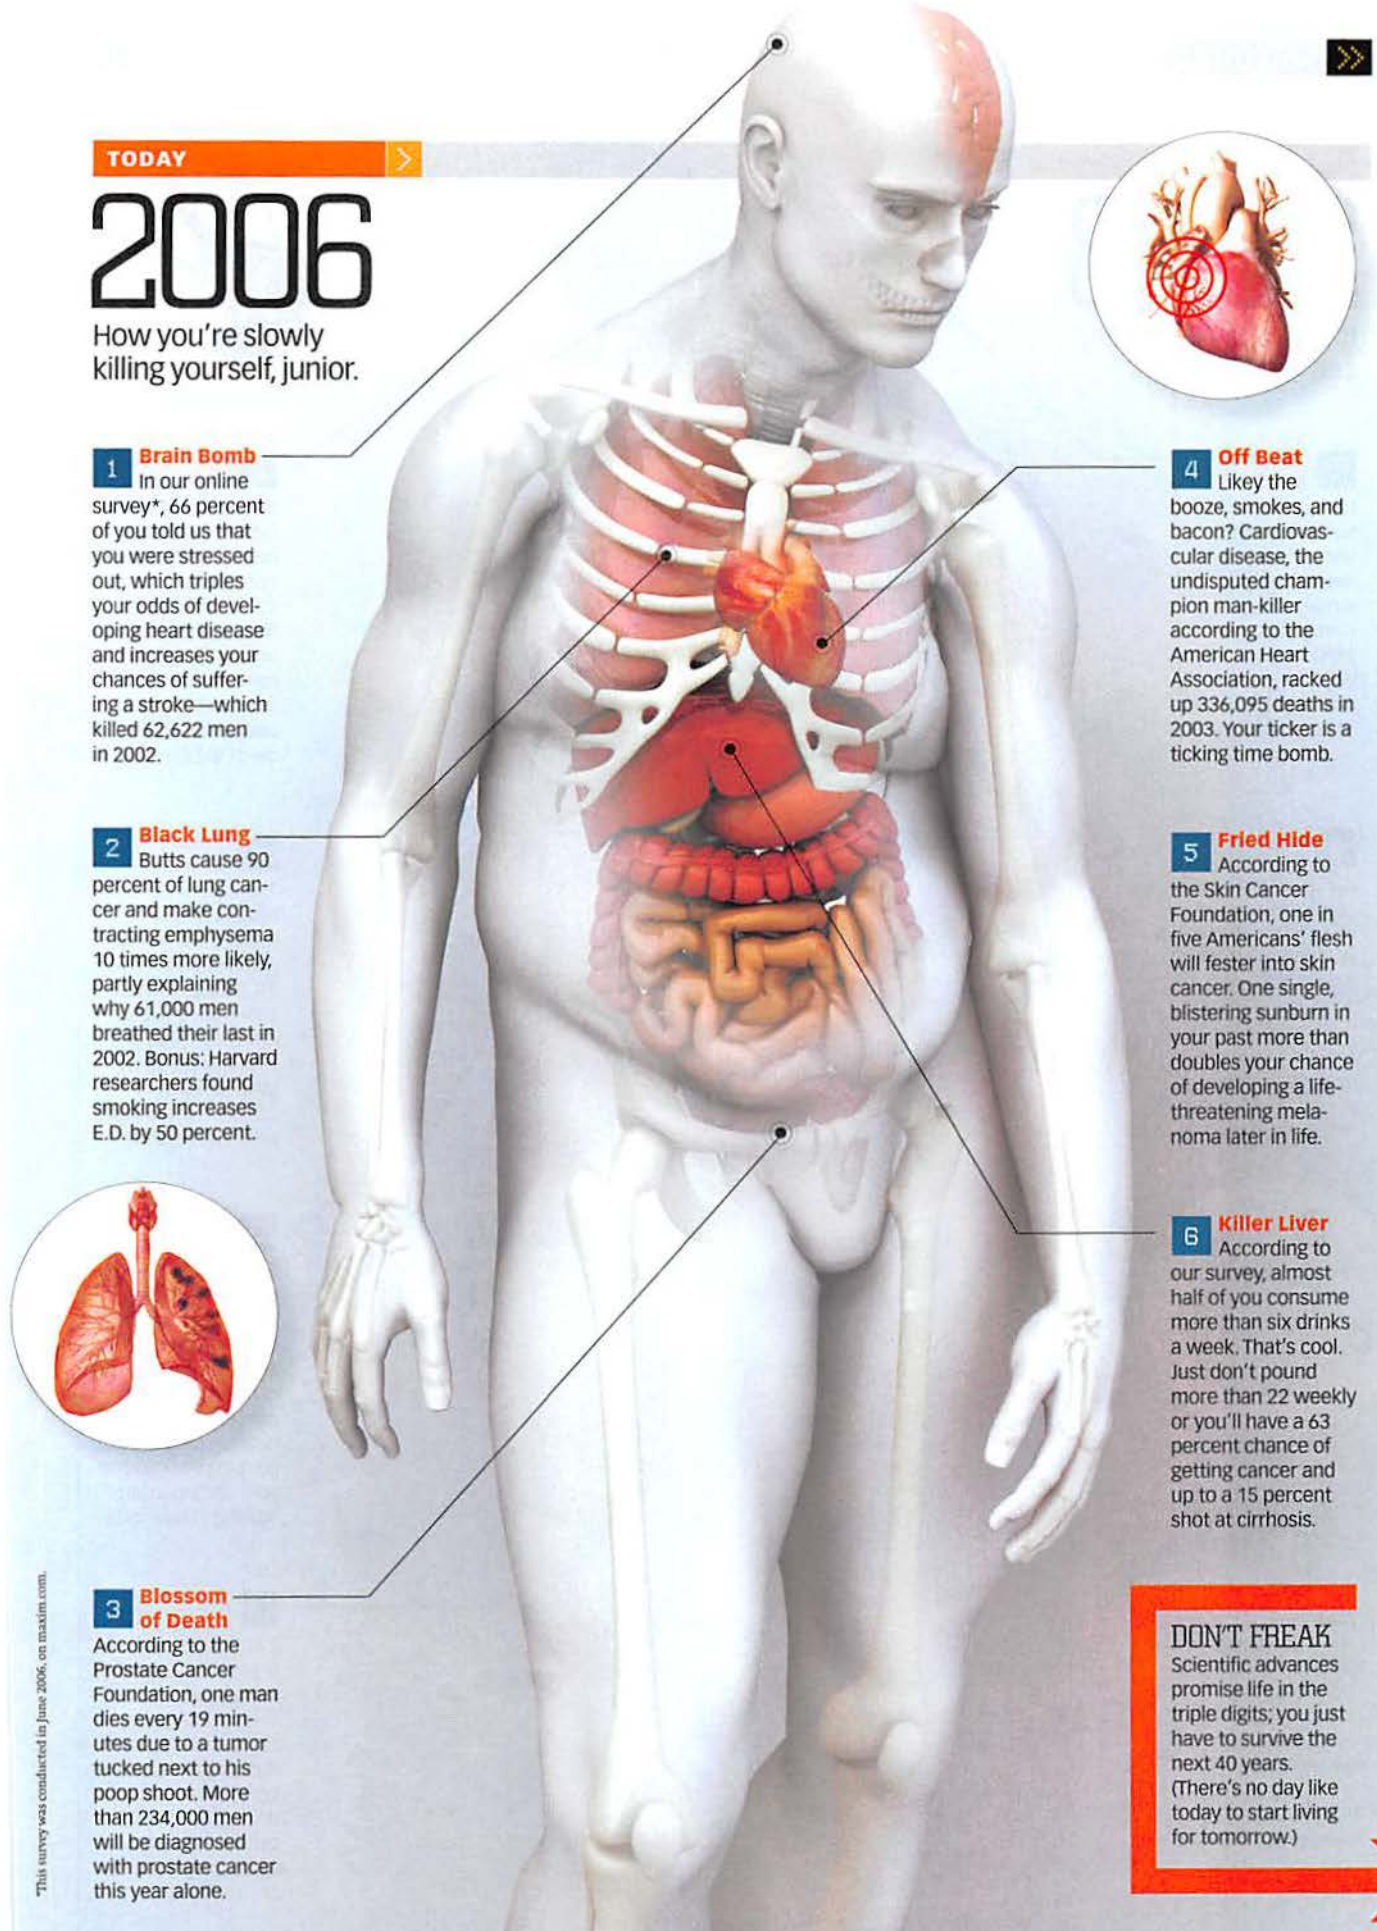
TODAY

2006

How you're slowly killing yourself, junior.



1 Brain Bomb
In our online survey*, 66 percent of you told us that you were stressed out, which triples your odds of developing heart disease and increases your chances of suffering a stroke—which killed 62,622 men in 2002.

2 Black Lung
Butts cause 90 percent of lung cancer and make contracting emphysema 10 times more likely, partly explaining why 61,000 men breathed their last in 2002. Bonus: Harvard researchers found smoking increases E.D. by 50 percent.

3 Blossom of Death
According to the Prostate Cancer Foundation, one man dies every 19 minutes due to a tumor tucked next to his poop shoot. More than 234,000 men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year alone.

4 Off Beat
Likey the booze, smokes, and bacon? Cardiovascular disease, the undisputed champion man-killer according to the American Heart Association, racked up 336,095 deaths in 2003. Your ticker is a ticking time bomb.

5 Fried Hide
According to the Skin Cancer Foundation, one in five Americans' flesh will fester into skin cancer. One single, blistering sunburn in your past more than doubles your chance of developing a life-threatening melanoma later in life.

6 Killer Liver
According to our survey, almost half of you consume more than six drinks a week. That's cool. Just don't pound more than 22 weekly or you'll have a 63 percent chance of getting cancer and up to a 15 percent shot at cirrhosis.

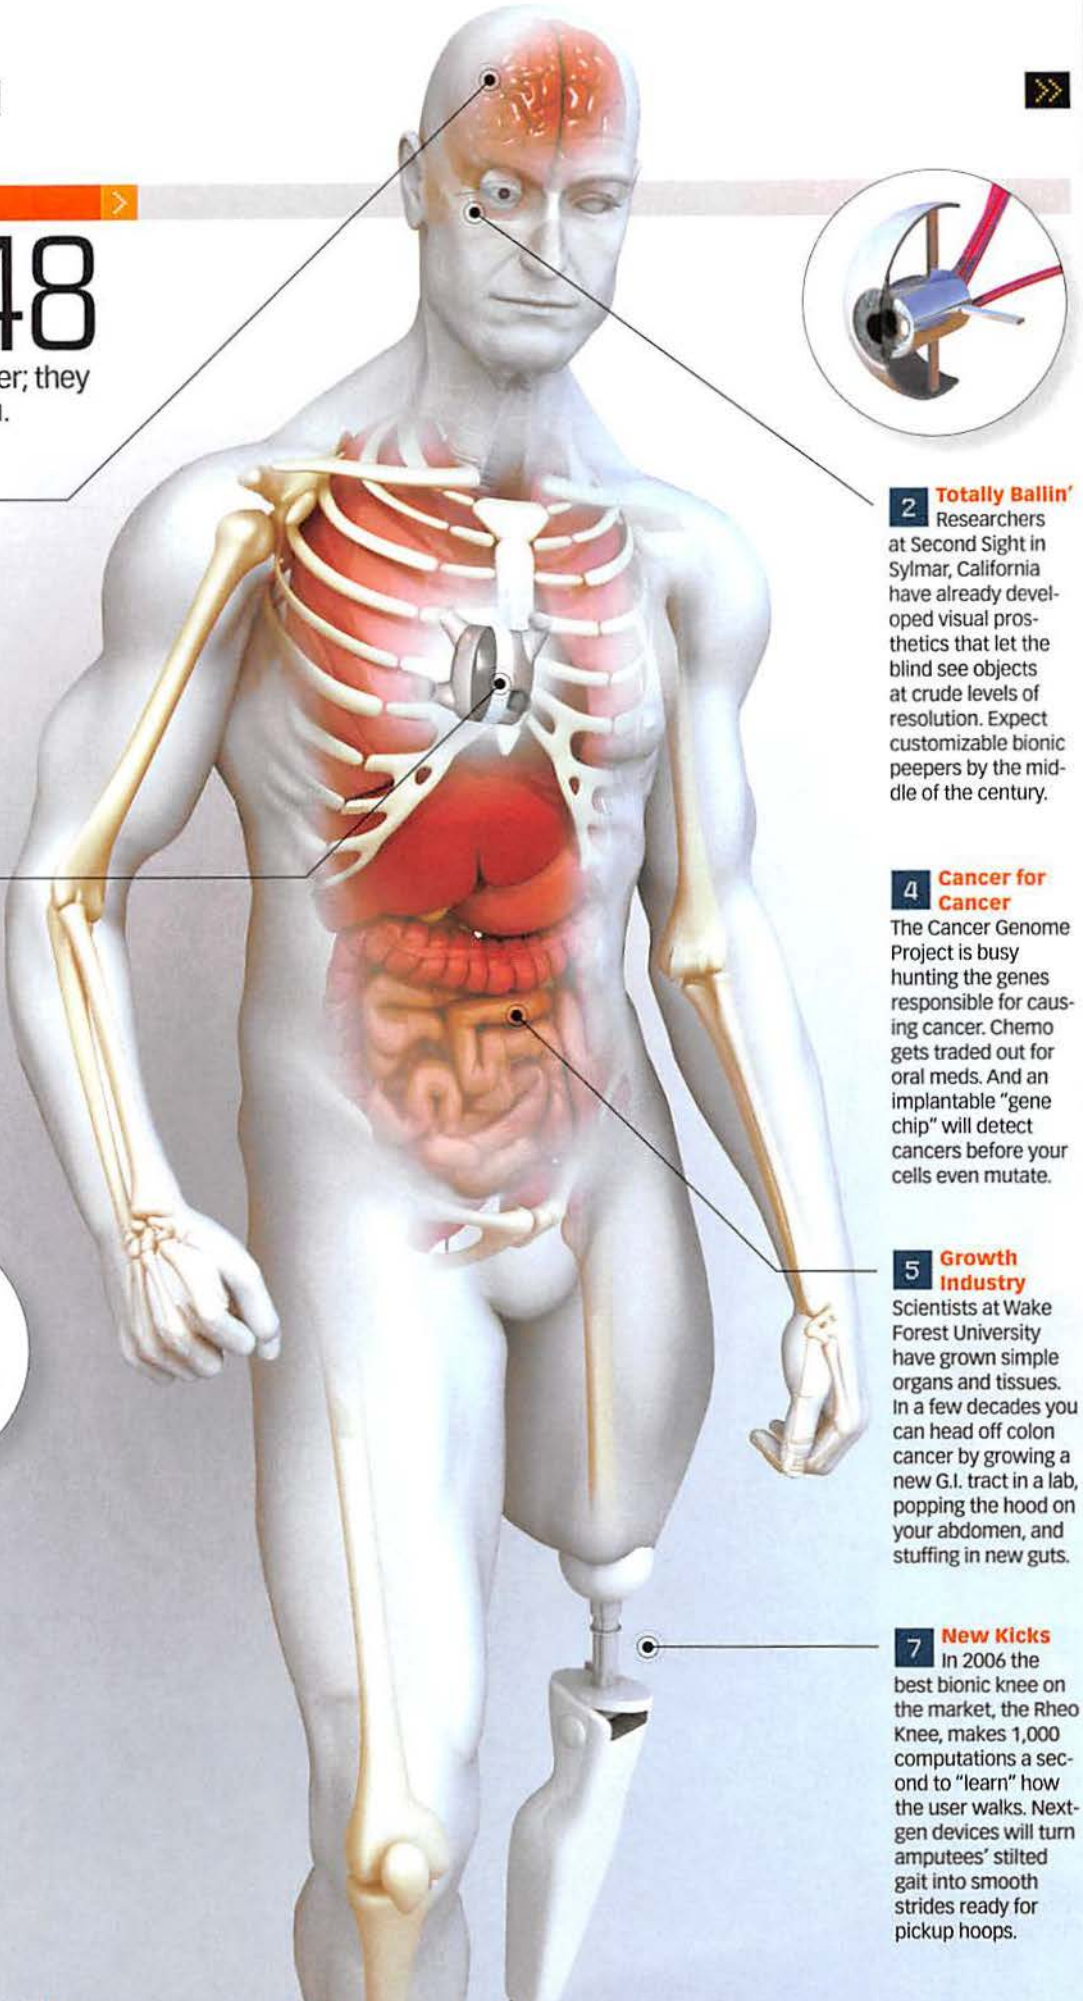
DON'T FREAK
Scientific advances promise life in the triple digits; you just have to survive the next 40 years. (There's no day like today to start living for tomorrow.)

*This survey was conducted in June 2006, on maxim.com.

TOMORROW

2048

It's 42 years later; they can rebuild you.



1 Habitual Offender
Clumsy meds like Naltrexone and Vivitrol can help detox drunks and junkies now. But the next generation of silver-bullet drugs will offer one-shot, one-kill capability for all your awesome vices.

2 Totally Ballin'
Researchers at Second Sight in Sylmar, California have already developed visual prosthetics that let the blind see objects at crude levels of resolution. Expect customizable bionic peepers by the middle of the century.

3 I, Tin Man
Abiomed made the world's first self-contained replacement heart and is rolling out upgraded tickers as early as 2008. Made from titanium and plastic and full of pumpy goodness, the Abio improves on God's first draft design.

4 Cancer for Cancer
The Cancer Genome Project is busy hunting the genes responsible for causing cancer. Chemo gets traded out for oral meds. And an implantable "gene chip" will detect cancers before your cells even mutate.

5 Growth Industry
Scientists at Wake Forest University have grown simple organs and tissues. In a few decades you can head off colon cancer by growing a new G.I. tract in a lab, popping the hood on your abdomen, and stuffing in new guts.

6 Forever Young
The Cenegenics Medical Institute pioneered "age management medicine," or human growth hormone therapy. Techniques like this will one day evolve to preserve your youth at the cellular level.

7 New Kicks
In 2006 the best bionic knee on the market, the Rheo Knee, makes 1,000 computations a second to "learn" how the user walks. Next-gen devices will turn amputees' stilted gait into smooth strides ready for pickup hoops.

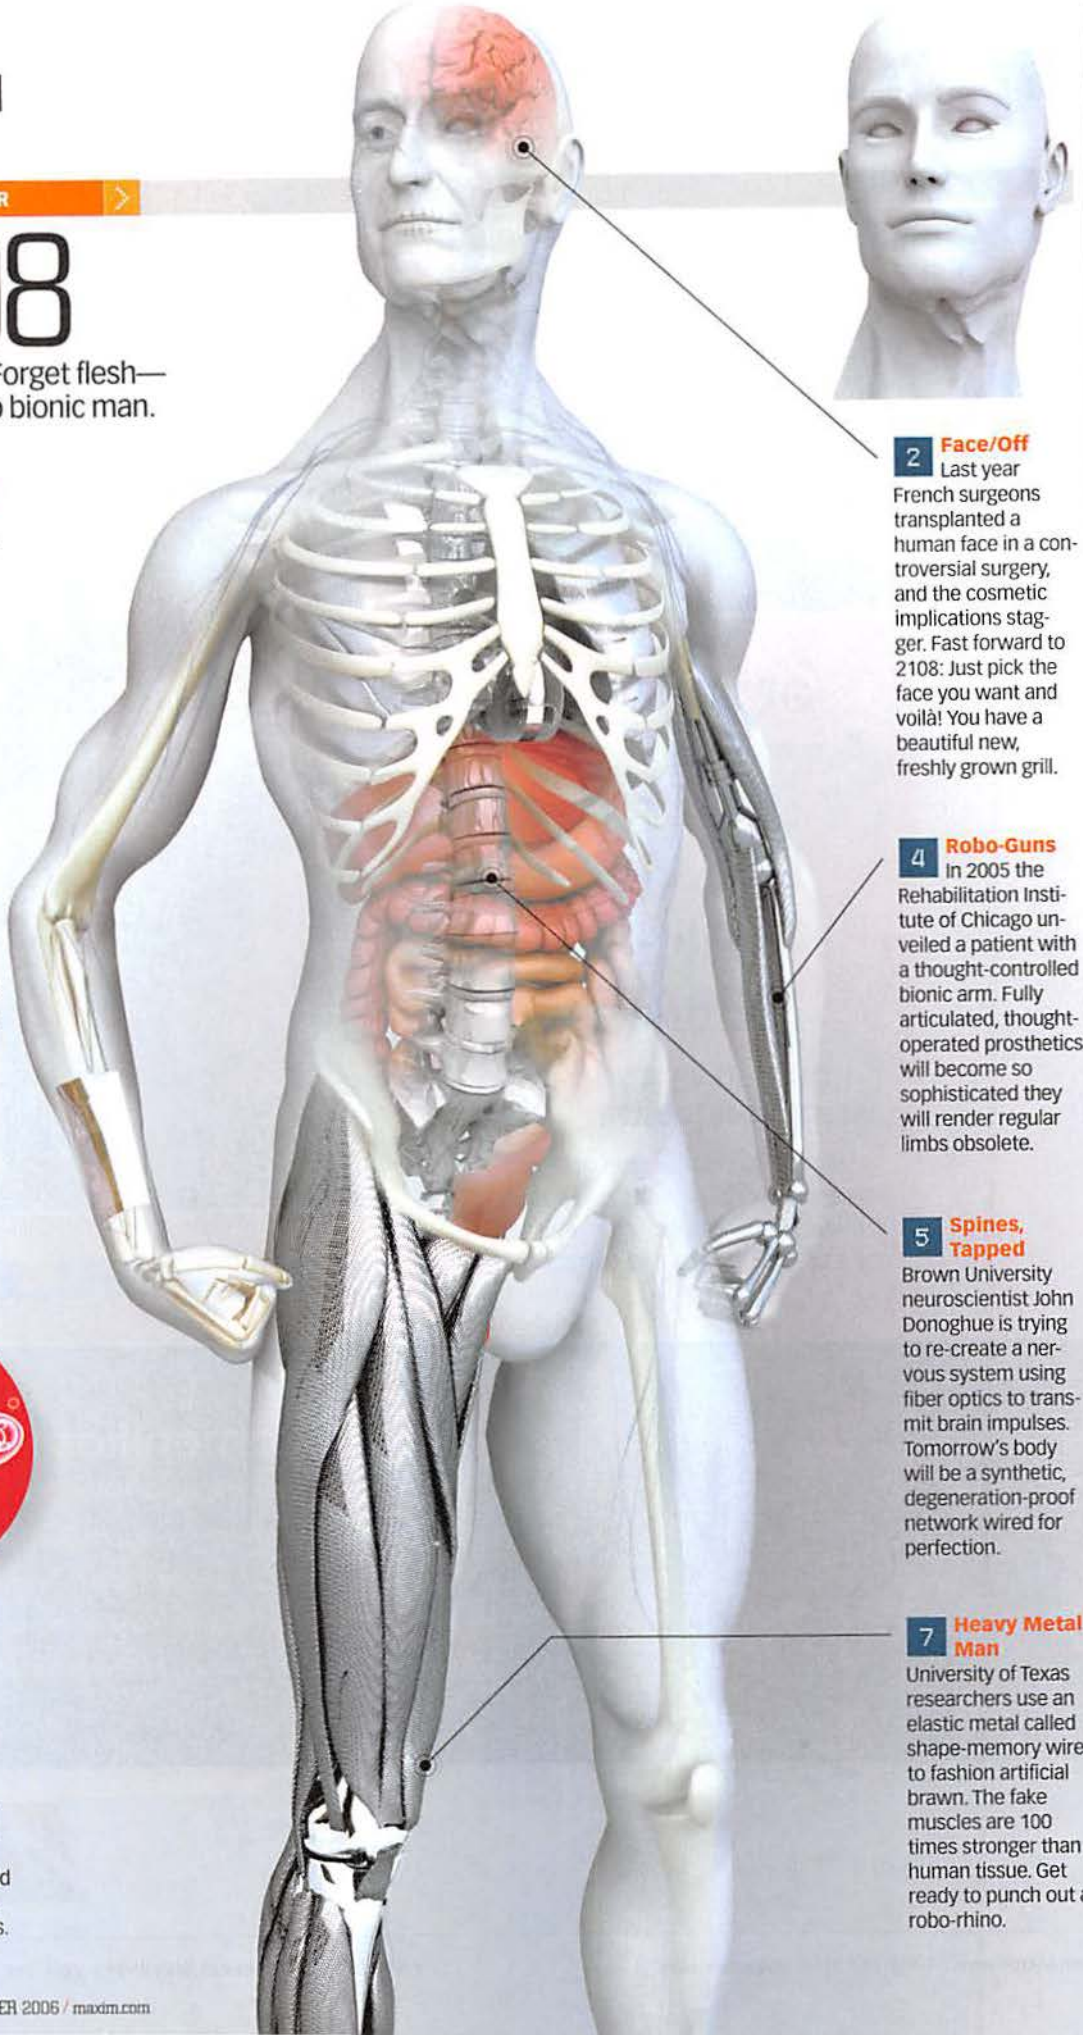
THE DAY AFTER

2108

Happy 130th! Forget flesh—you're a prefab bionic man.



1 Fat Chances
Stem cells are the stock cars of the body. Researchers at UCLA are transforming stem cells from fat tissue into muscle cells. This makes possible a future where the body does what it's told. That means more buffets and no Bowflex.

2 Face/Off
Last year French surgeons transplanted a human face in a controversial surgery, and the cosmetic implications stagger. Fast forward to 2108: Just pick the face you want and voilà! You have a beautiful new, freshly grown grill.

3 Instant Doc
Communications company BT Group's think tank of futurists predicts superthin polymers will stick to you and act like video tattoos. You won't need checkups in the near future—peep your "smart" ink for vital signs.

4 Robo-Guns
In 2005 the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago unveiled a patient with a thought-controlled bionic arm. Fully articulated, thought-operated prosthetics will become so sophisticated they will render regular limbs obsolete.

5 Spines, Tapped
Brown University neuroscientist John Donoghue is trying to re-create a nervous system using fiber optics to transmit brain impulses. Tomorrow's body will be a synthetic, degeneration-proof network wired for perfection.

6 Heal Thyself
Nanotechnology strives to build atom-size robots. Nick Bostrom of Oxford's Future of Humanity Institute says nanotech will allow us to control atoms and mold flesh like Play-Doh. Buh-bye, Band-Aids.

7 Heavy Metal Man
University of Texas researchers use an elastic metal called shape-memory wire to fashion artificial brawn. The fake muscles are 100 times stronger than human tissue. Get ready to punch out a robo-rhino.

The Wild,

You're in the middle of it—leaping off a 61-story tower.

By Stephan Talty Digital image by Eric Heintz

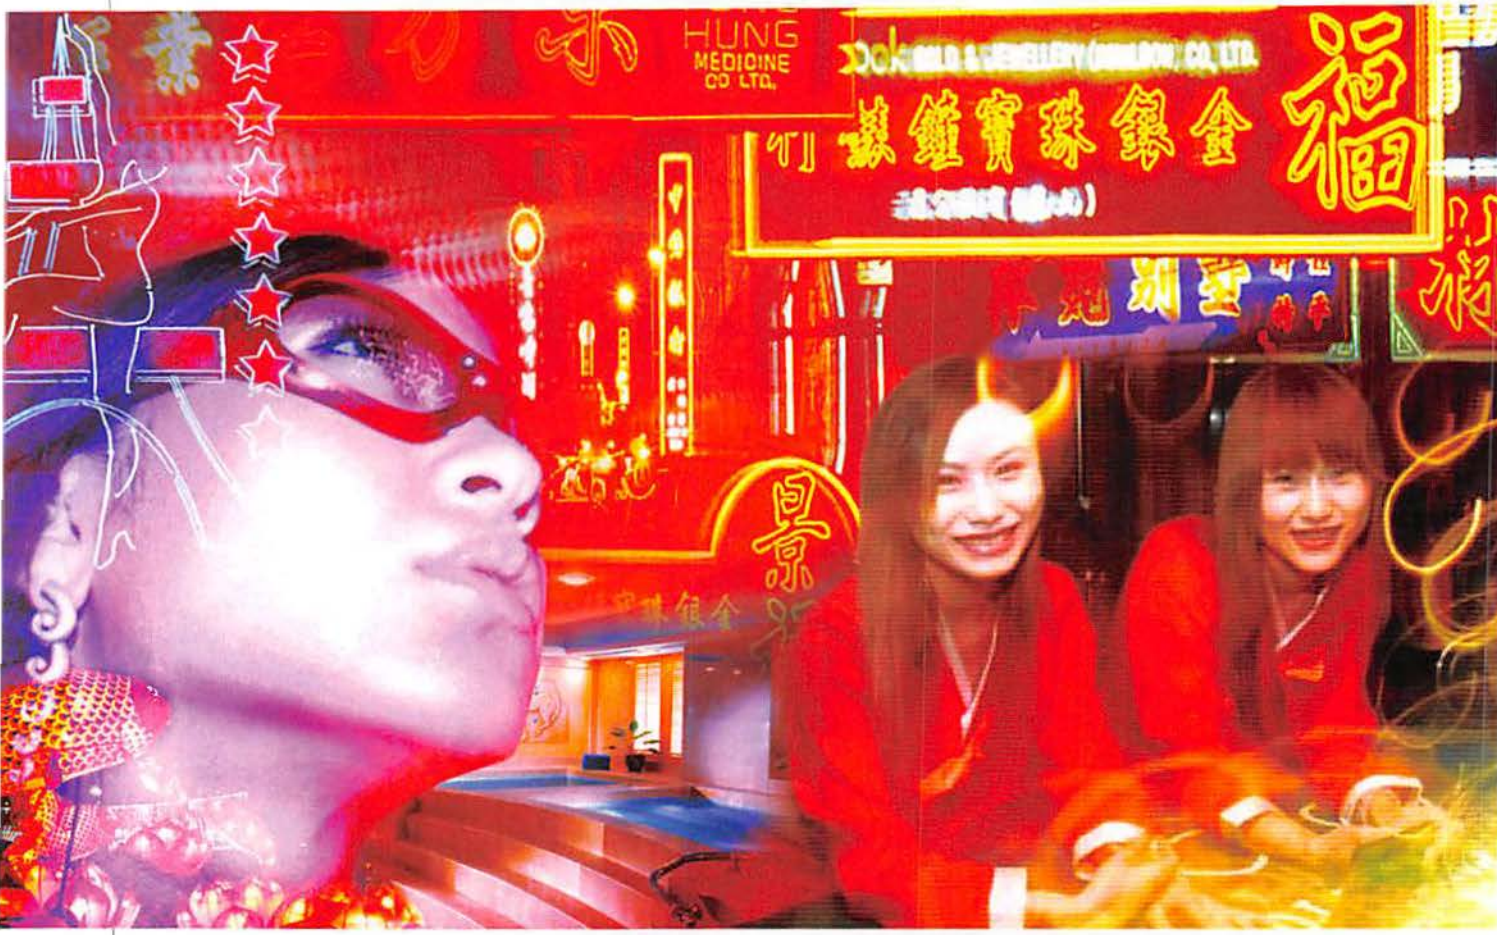
With every thrill imaginable, Macau is all about pleasure.

Wild East

Yelling in Cantonese as you slam down baccarat tiles.



Opium dens are no longer the destination of choice in Macau. Today the high is found in multimillion-dollar casinos, state-of-the-art saunas staffed by nubile Asian geishas (wrong country, but you get the idea), nightclubs where gangsters get their rocks off while singing "Endless Love" on the karaoke mike, and strip bars where leggy Russian chicks practice glasnost onstage. It's all here. It's all legal. And it goes all night.

That's not to say Macau rivals Bangkok in flesh-trade debauchery. It doesn't. But then, the country doesn't want sex tourists: It wants players.

The former Portuguese colony is where the new Chinese supercapitalists fly to in helicopters to play $1,000-ante poker. It's set to pass Vegas in profitability this year, and the amount of money bet per table at Macau's casinos is now five times what goes down in Nevada. Steve Wynn and the other casino moguls are pouring an estimated $10 billion into the place. There are even plans for an underwater casino—that's right, a casino located underwater—called the City of Dreams.

And now that Vegas' streets are packed with tweens knocking you off the sidewalk with their Bratz backpacks, this pleasure across the Pearl River estuary from Hong Kong is the next oasis for men looking to run wild in a James Bond kind of underworld and indulge their inner alpha male.

Imagine Sin City back when Bugsy Siegel still ran it.

Imagine Sin City back when Bugsy Siegel still ran it. Crossed with a Tarantino movie. That's Macau right now. So we took the hellacious 14-hour flight west and hooked up with our inside man on the ground, Papa Boi. Think of him as your personal tour guide, to whom you are now indebted.

RUSHES

Macau Tower: The 10th-tallest tower in the world lets you climb up the rain-whipped mast and walk around the outer rim (which has no handrail). If that's not enough of a thrill, just strap on a harness and jump off. (macautower.com.mo/eng/adventure)

Coloane Kartodromo: All you need to know is it has evening go-kart racing under the lights and seven courses from which you can choose. (882 126; Estrada de Seac Pai Van)

Dropping Anchor

Upon arriving on the peninsula on the TurboJet ferry from Hong Kong International Airport (a fast 45-minute ride), you're plunged into a neon-lit open-air carnival. Dried baby octopuses are for sale in the street stalls. Thousands of Chinese dudes and babes zip around on mopeds. Miniature Buddhist shrines are stationed outside every storefront—even the dance clubs have little ceramic warriors grimacing under glowing red lights.

Westerners head to modern casinos such as the new Sands, which offers a Martian, stardate 2098 atmosphere for degenerate wagering. The two-story-high TV screen and the bizarre variations on Vegas games, which include a contraption where the fuzzy dice bounce on a trampoline beneath a dome of glass, further fuel the freaky vibe. To complete the surreal effect, black-pajama'd waiters with bamboo hats, who look like they just arrived from the Ho Chi Minh Trail, pump out glasses of Chinese tea.

Older casinos such as the floating Macau Palace, where Roger Moore wagered in 1974's The Man With the Golden Gun, are still around, but popular mostly with gamblers from the Chinese mainland. The dealers speak Cantonese, and the action is fast as lightning and a little bit frightening. But where else can you watch gamblers chomp on noodles and play obscure Chinese games like fan tan, where the dealer plunges a silver cup into a pile of porcelain buttons while bettors wager on how many he captured?

For kicks, plunk down your money and toss around a few Cantonese insults at the dealer: "Pok gai" ("Go die in the street") will get his attention, and a muttered "Lun Yun" ("Dick face") will keep him honest, as the dealers here have been notorious in the past for subtracting their tip before paying out your winnings. Just don't turn to the heavily tattooed gambler next to you and shout, "Siu meh ah baht Po?" ("What are you laughing at, bitch?")

Before Macau was handed over to China in 1999, the place was practically run by the triads, crazy-for-real Chinese gangs with names like 14K, led by goodfellas like Broken Tooth. Forget guns—the triads would battle it out on the streets with hand grenades. The authorities will tell you that Beijing moved the triads out (and executed some of their leaders, just for the hell of it), but Papa Boi tells us that is only half-true.

"Most of the saunas and discos are run by ex-gangsters," he says. "Most gang members have since turned into 'businessmen,' making good money and managing their rackets with a lot of self-discipline."

Taste the Orient

Once you've got your fill of Macau Hold 'Em, it's time to dive into the wanton pleasures of Asia. There are the cabaret shows staffed by the hottest blondes out of Romania and Russia that put old-school Vegas to shame. There are the "nightclubs" (deluxe private rooms favored by businessmen and gangsters), where everything beyond your wildest imagination is on the menu.

Behold Hong Kong's badass neighbor

Then there are the saunas. Begin here.

For many of us, saunas conjure up visions of overweight Finnish women sweating. In Macau they're exclusively for men—swank places with full cocktail service, plush lounge chairs, and gigantor Jacuzzis, staffed by geishalike hostesses who will see to your every delicate need. These are not the smelly massage parlors from Route 10. These are temples of manhood where the rule book has been torn up.

When you stroll in, you're ushered into a locker room, where you strip, receive a towel, and are escorted to the 25-foot bath (there are three at different temperatures), where you can watch Japanese anime on the plasma TVs while sipping a cool drink. Then you're called into a private room. Naked, you stretch out on the massage table while your masseuse ladles hot water on you and goes to work (her technique includes holding on to bars hung from the ceiling and walking on your back).

Feel free to stop there. Or choose from actual menus of services, from the "cognac tastings" to the "honeymoon special," which runs $200 and means whatever the hell you want.

GRUB

A Lorcha: The good thing about being colonized by the Portuguese is they leave behind the tastiest restaurants. This is the best. A Fred Flintstone–size dinner sets you back $30. (313 193; 289 Rua do Almirante Sérgio)

Litoral: This high-class joint lets you watch nymphettes in thigh-huggers play laser tag on plasma TVs while you devour the best giant shrimp in Asia. (967 878; 261A Rua do Almirante Sérgio)

Fade to Black

With your body supple as a teenage girl's, it's time to head to the Bar Nova Guia, still referred to by its old name, Embassy Bar, in the Mandarin Oriental Hotel (mandarinoriental.com/macau), the nightlife epicenter of Macau. The Embassy looks like Jay Gatsby's study, with leatherbound books lining the walls, but this is the stock exchange of hookups in Macau. Stunning Asian women in black cocktail dresses are two and three deep at the bar. "There are more girls than guys," brags Papa Boi. "So they're chasing you!"

The Macau scene is about quality, not fetishes. "If you want to see a girl have sex with a snake, you go to Thailand," says Papa Boi. "Macau isn't kinky." The place is all about fantasy, sexuality, and femininity, and locals stress that the girls are their own bosses. Romanian girls earn as much in Macau in a week as they would in a year at home; the same goes for the Chinese girls from the mainland.

After getting lit up at the Embassy, your next stop will be the nightclubs. You need an entourage of at least six to party at these hidden spots. You walk in, order drinks, chat up the madam (make sure to tip her generously), and soon scantily clad honeys traipse in with your Carlsbergs. Also included in your prefab VIP party are next-generation karaoke systems that are a must for any self-respecting partyer. There is practically nothing that won't happen right there in the nightclubs. "I've seen karaoke parties so crazy the cops had to show up," laughs Papa Boi.

Prefer meeting ladies the old-fashioned way? The DD Disco is pretty much the only game in town for late-night clubbing; everyone heads here beginning at 3 A.M. The thunderous techno will lift you to the final stages of nightlife ecstasy or turn your brain to chop suey. Occasionally, off-the-clock casino dancers show up for a special performance. If you see them, feel free to jump onstage and make a play. The security guys are five-seven. What's to stop you?

At sunup, head back to the hotel and collapse. When you wake it will seem like a dream—except for the bite marks on your ass. M

GO-GOS

Jai Alai Show Palace: This cavernous black space is filled with peroxide-blonde pixies from the former U.S.S.R. The pole on the stage is at least two stories tall, and the East European strippers use it for some jaw-dropping maneuvers. You'll be treated well: The Chinese tend to watch the girls with robotic stares, so the gals love to see tipsy Americans stumble in. (726 126; Third Floor, Jai Alai Complex, Travessa do Reservatório)

The Many Moods of James Woods

The star of CBS's Shark is out on the front line of masculinity, sniffing out terrorists and dodging death. Mr. Woods is back, and he's watching you.

What's it like to be back on TV?
I love it. The best material is on TV. After I read the script for Shark, I thought, Wow, I haven't read a part like this in 10 years. Men in their 50s are typecast as the corporate villain. Shark gave me the opportunity to be a tainted hero—the best kind of hero to portray. It's a golden opportunity for an old samurai like myself.

How did you handle the lean years, when you weren't so popular?
I didn't mind when I was on the way down, 'cause I always knew I was gonna go back up. Every five or 10 years, it's your turn to get fucked seven ways from Sunday. The mistake people make is that they try to fight it—they do more publicity. Instead, I just shut my mouth and stayed away until I became a good idea again. And now I'm coming back big, just like clockwork.

Not everything has always worked out, though. Like the set of Salvador.
Yeah. There was a scene where a plane flies down the street and starts strafing John Savage and me. The plane was flown by a Mexican air force pilot who didn't speak English. And the stunt coordinator on the walkie-talkie didn't speak any Spanish. We're wired to the street with bullet squibs running up our legs. So if the plane goes out of control, we can't even run away. So I said, "Oliver [Stone], we gotta get a guy who can speak Spanish." He told me to stop holding up the shot. We got in an argument.

What happened?
I started hitchhiking to Mexico City, 300 miles away. They put the word out that a crazy gringo mass murderer with a .45 was out on the road, so don't pick him up. I'm out there. Nobody's picking me up. I'm belligerent, wandering around the desert. Finally, John Savage flew out in a helicopter and brought me back.

Sounds like a bad day.
I'm telling you, moviemaking is not fun. We did another scene at the Guatemalan border where a guy puts a gun to my head and pulls the trigger. I'll never forget kneeling there. My hands are behind my back. The guy puts the gun to my head and I hear him say, "Esta un blanca." And I go, "Fucking blanca? That's a blank. What, whoa, wait, hold on!" Oliver tells me to shut up. So I grabbed the gun, raised it in the air, pulled the trigger, and the blank went off. I was four seconds from being killed.

Didn't you have a real-life close call with the September 11 hijackers?
About a month before the attack, I got on this flight from Boston to L.A. As I was getting in the plane, I saw these four guys who looked like Palestinian terrorists, straight out of central casting. They were all dressed alike in, like, windbreakers and T-shirts, with no bags. Who flies cross-country without any carry-on luggage—no magazines, no books, not even a little bag with chewing gum in it? Whenever the pilot would go to the bathroom, the cockpit would be wide open, and the men would all look at each other. I thought, These guys are gonna hijack this plane.

So what did you do?
I went up to the cabin attendant—whatever the politically correct word is for stewardess—and I said, "It's probably a felony to say this out loud, but I think this plane is gonna be hijacked." And she said, "I'm having that same feeling. Are you talking about the four men in the matching windbreakers?" She called the captain, but the first officer came out. They both made reports to the Federal Aviation Administration. It turned out that two of the guys I saw were in the 9/11 attacks. Nobody wanted to listen then. They listen now, but it cost them almost 3,000 lives.

What's wrong with government?
There's no end in sight for this never-ending partisan bickering—it's to the point where we can't do business anymore. There are certain issues where "chat and communication" are not gonna work. You're never gonna get an abortionist and a person who believes in the sanctity of human life in the womb to agree on a compromise.

Are today's men pussies?
Men in America are ridiculously pathetic now. I was watching Russell Crowe in L.A. Confidential, and he's dangerous. But have you noticed anytime they want that quintessential sort of brute, primal male, they cast an Australian? That worries me. When I was at M.I.T., I took a class in sociology, and one of the theories about the rise of Nazism in Germany was that after losing World War I the men were so degraded that they fell prey to the easy platitudes of the Nazis.

Men aren't that bad, are we?
Look at how men are portrayed in commercials. They're complete bozos. They'll be talking to, like, an insurance salesman or something, and the woman is always rolling her eyes because her husband can't understand anything.

Well, you're certainly a real man. Your cameo on Entourage proves that.
When they offered that to me, I thought it was funny, but they left out the fact that I like beautiful women. James Woods should have a beautiful girlfriend. So I said, "I'll bring my own." I brought in my girlfriend, Ashley, and of course, she walked in, and they went, "Nice choice."

What's your secret to dating younger women like Ashley?
The joke is always, "The same reason a dog licks his dick—because he can." M

DEAL OF A LIFETIME

A million bucks, massive ratings, and 26 silver briefcases. Yup, the girls of Deal or No Deal are cleared for takeoff.

ANYA

No one's won $1 million yet. Who came closest?
One of the contestants was really big on the Bible. She gave this powerful speech, saying, "Last night I asked, and today I am going to receive." At the end there were only a few cases left, with only a few low numbers and the million on the board. And you know what? She sold her case for, like, $200,000 or $300,000. She should have had more faith—it turned out she had the million!

Ooh, that sucks.
It's all part of the game, but in the long run they're going to walk off with some money. They're still better off than when they first came in.

GOLD.
IT'S THE NEW RED.

NO BULL.

APRIL

Ever cried after someone lost?
We had one woman whose husband was a marine in Iraq. He was actually on the show via satellite to give her advice. She was doing really well, and her husband told her to stop and take the deal, but she didn't and lost everything.
She got greedy!
Well, maybe it's blind faith. People start choosing the right cases, and they think their luck's going to hold up. But luck goes both ways!
What about a guy is a deal-breaker?
Once I was going on a first date with a guy, and he turned on the radio, flipped through the stations, and then stopped on Céline Dion. That was a huge deal-breaker. I mean, I like a lot of music, but when he turned on that crap, there was no way.

MEGAN

Which game show host is hottest?
Howie Mandel, of course! My ex-boyfriend has a shaved head, so that look really appeals to me. Plus, Howie is nice and caring.

Do you risk it all or take the deal?
You know, I'm not a big risk-taker. A million dollars would be very nice, but at the same time, I would be happy with only $100,000—money isn't everything.

Let's say you win a million bucks... What do you buy?
A puppy. My boyfriend and I just broke up, and he got our dog. I miss that little fur ball.

LANISHA

Let's get down to business. Mandals. Deal or no deal?
A huge no deal—walk away, walk away! What's even worse is when guys wear them with socks. It's disgusting. Burn them all!

What else turns you off?
Back hair! Bad clothes I can deal with; I can burn them while he's sleeping. But back hair is not sexy.

Did you watch many game shows as a kid?
Oh, my gosh! I remember watching The Price Is Right with my mother when I was growing up in Pasadena. The episode that sticks out most in my mind was when this lady slipped and fell while spinning the wheel. We were dying laughing!

10 YOU GOTTA SEE

There are hundreds of cable channels, thousands of TV programs, and nothing to watch. Here are 10 reasons to feel mad that you only have but two eyeballs.

10 I SHOULDN'T BE ALIVE DISCOVERY

Think you could survive a shark bite while rotting away in a rubber raft filled with your own fecal matter? Of course not—but someone else has, and I Shouldn't Be Alive is there, sifting through the sepsis, interviewing the lucky survivors, and zooming in on every cringeworthy detail with CSI-style aplomb. Bring your own barf bag.

9 AQUA TEEN HUNGER FORCE CARTOON NETWORK

Frylock. Master Shake. Meatwad. Adult Swim has been giving us animated insanity since Space Ghost, but nothing quite so demented as the adventures of this trio of fast-food products. Not only is it a stoner's dream come true; it also has the best theme song on television.

8 THE OFFICE
NBC

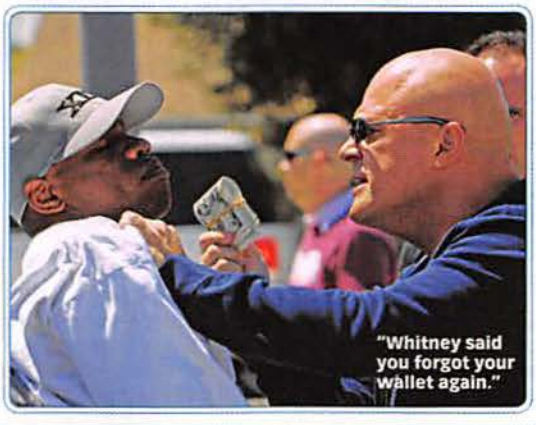
Fans of the U.K. version rejected NBC's Americanization like a bad kidney, rushing to their precious Internets to complain that Steve Carell and Co. were doing the Designer Imposter version of the show. And while angry Anglophiles wept into their tea, the rest of us pissed our pants at the most brilliant send-up of cubicle hell since Office Space.

7 HOUSE
FOX

Dr. Gregory House is one watchable bastard. When he's not battling a painkiller addition, he's saving lives, a process that usually includes a heady combination of traumatizing patients, belittling coworkers, and breaking every rule in the book. If you've ever wondered what it would be like if Barry Bonds were a surgeon, this is the show for you.

6 THE SHIELD
FX

There are good cops. There are bad cops. And then there's Detective Vic Mackey, a man so venal he makes Nicaraguan death squads look like Frank Drebin in The Naked Gun. Last season Vic's right-hand man crossed the fine line that separates "troubled" from "batshit" when he murdered a fellow cop.



AND THE WINNER IS...

TV Awards

We hand out the gold stars and brown stars.

Best Comeback by a Former Sitcom Star: Neil Patrick Harris, How I Met Your Mother.

The "Hey, That Show's Still On?" Award: ER, now entering its billionth season.

Best Child Actor: Wise-ass 13-year-old Angus T. Young on Two and a Half Men.

Best Self-Parody by an Aging Rocker: Mick Jagger, The Knights of Prosperity.

Trend of the Year: TV shows about fake TV shows, notably NBC's 30 Rock and Studio 60.

Best Free Cable Network: FX, for being so profane we'd actually pay to watch.

The Back-to-Back Award: To the dynamic pairing of My Name Is Earl and The Office.

Best Cable Network You Should Really Watch But Don't Pay For: Showtime.

Worst TV Anchor Hair: Matt Lauer, for looking like a recovering chemo patient.

Hottest Chef on TV: Giada De Laurentiis. (Sorry, Rachael Ray.)

The Law of Diminishing Returns Award: The OC. Them wheels came off fast, eh?

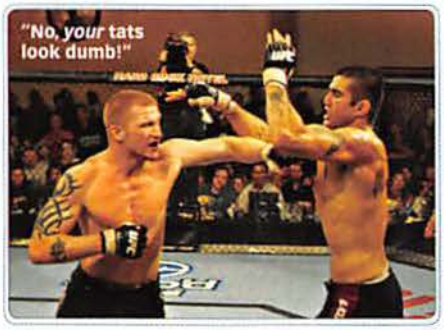
Most Emotionally Pornographic Reality Show: Intervention, on A&E.

Guiltiest Pleasure: Watching idiots compete on The Real World/Road Rules Challenge.

The "Good Idea!" Award: To NBC and the NFL for Football Night in America.

Best Hair, Mullet Division: Dog the Bounty Hunter, for those amber waves of great.



5 ULTIMATE FIGHTER SPIKE TV

Here's a recipe for reality TV greatness. Take 16 incredibly violent, generally shirtless dudes with bad tattoos. Stick 'em in a house with no TV or Internet, zero contact with the outside world, and an open bar. Then at the end of every episode, force two of them to beat the shit out of each other in hopes of winning a six-figure contract with the UFC.

4 THE WIRE HBO

Each season this criminally underwatched crime show enlists TV's best writers to craft self-contained, season-long story arcs set on Baltimore's bad streets. Tune in.

3 ENTOURAGE HBO

This show is like a big bag of Doritos. Sure, watching four friends bullshit their way through Hollywood is a half-hour of empty calories, a nonstop jokefest that's as high-minded as the VIP lounge of a strip club. But that's why it's so brilliant.

2 24 FOX

Unless you suffer from anxiety-induced heart attacks, you've got no excuse to miss the weekly adventures of Jack Bauer, a man so hellbent on saving the world he'll shoot women. This show is so exciting that Fox's promos should be done by the same guy who does those monster truck advertisements featuring Truckazilla: "You'll pay for the whole seat, but you'll only use the edge!"

AND THE WINNER IS...

Best Hair, Mommy Division: Chloë Sevigny (Nicolette) and her French braid, Big Love.

Worst Ads: TNT's animated blurbs that block out half the game for 20 seconds.

Best TV Dis: South Park, for demolishing Family Guy in two brilliant episodes.

Pound-for-Pound Funniest Award: Adult Swim, for packing laughs into every second.

The "Shit, the Line to CTU Is Busy...But They'll Save Us!" Award: The Unit, on CBS.

Best 60-Minute Show That Will Give You the Heebie-Jeebies: The 4400, on USA.

Best Salute to Guys and the Shit We Build: Modern Marvels, History Channel.

Best Show...If You've Got Dentures: Antiques Roadshow, on PBS.

The "Eh, No One's Watchin'; Fuck It" Award: The Late, Late Show's Craig Ferguson.

Best Character You Secretly Envy as Your Girl Swoons: "McDreamy," Grey's Anatomy.

Best Hair, Jersey Division: Silvio Dante's pompadour, The Sopranos.

Best Reason to Smoke Dope: Cartoon Network's Robot Chicken.

Hottest Cartoon Broad: Justice League's Black Canary. She's purdy.

The "By Gawd, She's Got a Steel Chair!" Award: The feuding ladies of The View.

Most Missed Part of a Once-Great Show: Jerry Orbach, Law & Order. RIP, Briscoe!

LOST ABC

This is the reason why they invented the DVR. With character histories that are more intertwined than a West Virginia family reunion and go-anywhere plotlines that involve electromagnetism, polar bears in tropical jungles, kids with ESP, and sinister science experiments gone wrong (see page 126 for more details), this isn't just a show you watch: It's a show you watch again and again, poring over every single frame looking for any clue about what the hell is going to happen next week.

WATCH THESE

Sweet TV Newness!

30 Rock, NBC
Need a good reason to watch this? Here are two: Tracy Morgan and Alec Baldwin.

Metalocalypse, Cartoon Network
This heavy-metal cartoon rocks so hard, unicorns are crying blood.

The Nine, ABC
The mystery isn't about who held nine people hostage; it's what happened to them in there.

Smith, CBS
Ray Liotta sets up heists, whizzes away in speedboats, then goes home to kiss his wife.

Dexter, Showtime
Imagine if one of the dudes from CSI was a serial killer who really loved taking work home.

1 The Plane Crashes
Oceanic Flight 815 crashes on a magical island whose properties allow a paraplegic named Locke to walk again. As the survivors pick through the rubble, led by a surgeon named Jack, the central mysteries that drive Lost emerge: Where are they? And why are they there?

2 They Hear Things
The castaways pick up a French distress signal recorded by Danielle Rousseau, a scientist stranded on the island when her research vessel sank. Armed with a rifle, Rousseau lives in constant fear of a group called the Others, who kidnapped her daughter, Alex.

12 They Don't Push It
Because of Michael, the Others capture Jack and three castaways. Meanwhile, Locke doesn't push the button, unleashing an electromagnetic pulse, revealing how Flight 815 crashed in the first place: The island pulled it to Earth.

TV

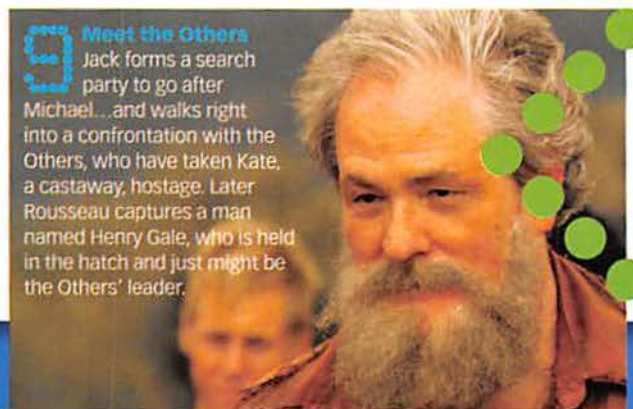
HOW TO GET LOST

Can't wrap your head around the best show on television? Read this.

11 Michael Returns!
Michael's found unconscious. After waking he lets Henry escape, murders Ana Lucia and another castaway, wounds himself to avoid suspicion, and selects a strike force to attack the Others' camp. The moves are part of a larger plan to swap fellow castaways for his son.

10 Locke's Discoveries
While Locke keeps an eye on Henry in the hatch, blast doors suddenly drop from the ceiling, revealing a hand-drawn map of the island—for an instant. From memory, Locke discovers a second hatch used to monitor activity in the first hatch, which seems to indicate pushing the button is nothing more than a cruel psych experiment.

9 Meet the Others
Jack forms a search party to go after Michael...and walks right into a confrontation with the Others, who have taken Kate, a castaway, hostage. Later Rousseau captures a man named Henry Gale, who is held in the hatch and just might be the Others' leader.



Text: Eric Gillin; research: Jonah Adkins

3 The Others Attack!
A deadly smoke monster terrorizes the castaways, but after checking the flight manifest the castaways realize that's the least of their worries. Ethan, one of the Others, has infiltrated their ranks. After kicking Jack's ass, Ethan kidnaps a pregnant Australian castaway, Claire, and vanishes into the jungle.

4 They Discover a Secret Hatch
While searching for Claire, Locke stumbles upon a mysterious hatch with no handle or visible means to open it. At the end of the first season, the castaways use explosives from the Black Rock, a ship found on the island, to blow the hatch door.

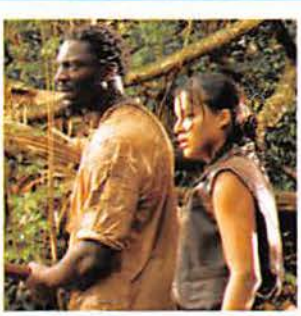
5 Everything Changes
The hatch leads to an underground bunker staffed by a man named Desmond. Every 108 minutes, he types a sequence (4, 8, 15, 16, 23, 42) into a computer and warns that bad things will happen if he doesn't. With new people around to push the button, Desmond flees.

8 Someone Dies
While trekking across the island, the Tailies run into two castaways: spoiled hottie Shannon and her lover Sayid, a former Iraqi Republican Guardsman. Startled, Ana Lucia kills Shannon. Meanwhile, Michael grabs a gun and runs off into the jungle to look for his son.



7 New Castaways Appear
The raft escapees wash up on a beach and are captured by the Tailies, the other survivors of Flight 815, who were sitting in the back of the plane and landed elsewhere on the island. Recently attacked by the Others, the Tailies are led by Ana Lucia, a hot-tempered ex-cop, and Mr. Eko, an African soldier who has discovered religion.

6 They Build a Raft
Claire escapes from the Others and gives birth to a baby boy. Meanwhile, an overprotective dad named Michael leads the construction of a raft that'll allow him and his son, Walt, to get off the island. But while Michael and his crew are out on the ocean, they're attacked by the Others, who wreck the raft and snatch Walt.

Pack It In

Take that transatlantic trip in style, armed with a bag that'll hold all your gear.

It makes sense that one of the ultimate suitcases for world-class jet-setters is from the Pininfarina collection of travel bags made by Bric's, an old-world manufacturer in Como, Italy. The Pininfarina artisans know a thing or two about style—they design the coachwork for Alfa Romeo and Ferrari. For Bric's they've souped up a 24-inch suitcase with an eye-catching silver finish over heavy-duty ABS and polycarbonate materials (all trimmed in fine leather, of course), four rolling wheels for better maneuverability, and a high-security combination lock to keep intruders out. At $440 this 24-inch Pininfarina case by Bric's is a total badass!

"DUMP YOUR GIRLFRIEND FOR ME!"

Nicole, 20, wants to plan parties for a living. Here's why you'd want to be on her guest list.

She's got a wicked side! "Most of the time I'm a good girl, but behind closed doors I'm into breaking the rules." She's a human Gumby! "I'm double-jointed! I can twist my arms up and around behind my back and just keep going like a jump rope."

She'll fatten you up! "I'm not Italian, but I make an amazing penne à la vodka." She gets the party started! "Put a little alcohol in me and I'll dance! I win 'shake your ass' contests during spring break." She won't eat up your cash! "I always offer to pay half on a date. I'm no gold digger!"

She loves sports! "I don't care if a guy wants to watch baseball on Sunday. But I'd rather go to a game with him." She gives the best gifts! "I love to surprise a guy I like with sweet gestures, like cards out of nowhere, to show him I care. I once even got an ex-boyfriend a stripper for his birthday."

SMALL TALK

SEXY IN PUBLIC

We bumped into 22-year-old knockout Nicole in Aisle 3.

Photographs by Tony Stamolis

So what are you up to?
Can't you guess?
Grocery shopping?
Yep.
Do you usually shop in bodegas?
Sometimes. They play Spanish music. Good Spanish music. I like that.
What are you buying?
Lots of fruits and vegetables. But I'm not a vegetarian.
It's OK—we're not judging.
I eat hamburgers and steak.
Buying dog food, huh?
I have a mini-schnauzer. He's almost two.
Does he do bad things?
Yes.
You look pretty fit.
I played softball for six years. And I go to the gym.
Has a guy ever hit on you while you were shopping?
Yeah, I guess.
You like going out?
Sometimes. But I kind of just like staying home.
OK, see you later.

Penalty for Early Withdrawal?

Can this "Secret Formula" Really Improve Your Stamina and Sexual Performance?

Ask Steffanie:

Hey fellas – if YOUR lack of endurance is keeping HER from scoring the Big O – then read this letter that reveals the sexual stamina secret that keeps you out of the penalty box and in the pleasure zone!

Dear Steffanie,

I know a lot of men read your column and could really benefit from this important stamina secret my boyfriend and I recently discovered.

As much as I hate to throw him under the bus, my boyfriend's sexual performance is less than adequate when it comes to "endurance". He tries hard to please me and I can tell that he believes he's doing a great job, which is why it was so difficult for me to tell him the truth.

We've been together for about a year but last month, after what he thought was a "strong effort" for a Saturday afternoon, I couldn't help but be disappointed and I let him know there could be a bit of a gap between his perception of his sexual performance and our sexual reality.

I told him that I love him but when it came to the "duration" of our lovemaking, I was often left feeling extremely frustrated - he always "got his" and that if he could "hold out" just a little longer, maybe I could "get mine".

He said he always thought that when he "punched the clock", he was pulling a "full shift". Of course, he was shocked by this huge blow to his ego but after some serious sulking and a whole lot of denial, he realized his stamina and sexual performance really could use some improvement.

He was serious about improving his performance so he did some research and spoke to a doctor friend of his. His friend told him about a number of cheap desensitizing creams on the market that might help him last a little longer but were known to possibly hurt erection quality and worse, they tend to numb a woman - which as far as I'm concerned, defeats the whole purpose! Great – so now he'd be able to last longer but I'd be numb too! That was the last thing our relationship needed!

His doctor friend also told him that if he really wanted to improve climax control and still maintain maximum firmness, he should try a new product called Vivaxa™ from the makers of Maxoderm™ (the #1 topical male performance product that instantly improves erection quality). The ingredients in this new "stamina secret" make it different from other climax control products because it contains a clinically tested ingredient that is unlike anything else on the planet! It actually HELPS erection quality and firmness. And best of all, the formula absorbs super fast upon application so it won't numb a woman! Improved erection quality AND increase in stamina, it seemed too good to be true!

My boyfriend got a sample and that weekend we tried it. From the very first application, he felt more firm and full than ever before and let's just say that by the time we'd finished making love, I'D GOTTEN MINE TWICE! Needless to say, this has been a record breaking month for us. I know he feels great knowing that I'm completely satisfied and he's the reason why. Let's just say his confidence wasn't the only thing that shot through the roof!

So Steffanie, please print this letter – I'm sure there's a ton of women out there wishing their men used Vivaxa, a quality Climax Control product that lets him put in the extra time without numbing her! I know their still offering a FREE MONTH SUPPLY if you call 1-800-676-4416 or visit their website www.vivaxa.com. Tell your readers to hurry because supplies were limited when I called.

Dear Readers,

FROM THE MAKERS OF MAXODERM Male Enhancement Formula

I did some research on Vivaxa and here's what I found: Vivaxa uses groundbreaking, advanced topical technology that's been in research and development for over 10 years. It's the first (and only) stamina and sexual performance enhancer on the market to utilize Calmosensine, along with Peptide 171. This helps men to significantly enhance their stamina and sexual performance without desensitizing female partners. You can check out Vivaxa by calling 1-800-676-4416 or by visiting www.vivaxa.com and FOR A LIMITED TIME, you can receive a FREE tube with your order. Don't let her question your staying power anymore. Call Today! - GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

I just watched "Passion of the Christ." Three things. One: Love thy neighbor, jerk. Two: I'm a Jew. Hello? And three: You have serious homoerotic S&M issues.

I am just ashamed of you, Mel. I made a movie about the horrors of the Holocaust for one reason: profit. And here you are, giving away your specialness for free.
